My wife and I will be in the area February 7th and we were interested in sitting in on a day of testimony. I know trials are open to the public but during some high publicity cases, seating can be on a first come first seated basis with the courtroom closed at capacity. I saw the live coverage and was surprised the courtroom was only probably half full. I noticed many in the gallery wearing badges that jurors, witnesses, media or court personnel might wear. So is there a process or screening to attend? Something we need to do in advance? Just trying to avoid an inconvenience for you and or us that day. Thanks for your kindest consideration and all the behind the scenes work you and your staff do to manage a zoo like this. Thanks

Good morning, Holly,

You can find the form on our www.colletoncounty.org website. Click on Clerk of Court. Then click the Murdaugh Trial. You will see a link to download media form. Send it back in to me. Do you know how long you want to be in the courtroom?

I will be glad to put your mom on the list for Tuesday and Wednesday. She can meet us at the side entrance on Walter Street under the covered porch area. It is our entrance to our family court courtroom. She doesn't have to come until 830 am.

We will meet her there, along with some others!

We are getting ready for state and understand the gravity of the case being held in Colleton County . I along with another member of the team came today to learn more about the judicial system through the Murdaugh case however we live so far away that it was impossible to get in as we woke up at 4:30am and drove straight there from Savannah and still had around 40 people in front of us after the courtroom was full. I inquired with a police officer there about reserving seats for a learning opportunity and he said to reach out to you as you have granted it in the past and could possibly make arrangements. I was wondering if this was possible for Monday February 27, 2023? I know that it is last minute but I did not know how challenging it would be to obtain a seat. Please let me know if this would be at all possible? Thank you in advance have a wonderful day!

Oh Linda, you've come a along way! I would love to get your thoughts on all of this at some point. Please message me when you leave your car and I will come down to meet you and bring you in as my guest.

I would suggest coming in @ 840. If you would walk to our side entrance where it says in a big red sign on door, NO ENTRANCE. I'm going to come and let you in.

Yes, you do. Please meet me at the side door on Walter Street at 8:40. I have a few others meeting there as well. It is the area that is a private entrance and in fact says Do Not Enter. or No Entrance. But meet me there at that time. Either me or one of my staff will bring y'all in as guests.

Hi Rebecca,

Apparently my name is not on the list. I just stopped by security during the lunch break. I drove from Lancaster and I am staying at a hotel nearby. I hope I can get in tomorrow please. The girl with security told me to be here by 6:30am.

I am the former federal prosecutor with DHS. I also started a You Tube media account focusing on truth and justice. Thus, why I was requesting the media badge as I want to report on how the jury reacts to closing arguments. But a former federal prosecutor badge is fine as well - I have my retirement credentials if they want to see them. I fear security doesn't like media.

I was hoping I could get here a little later and get in. If you could please put my name on the list for tomorrow and Wednesday I would greatly appreciate it. Thank you kindly.

Best Regards,
Susan Hiller

Dear Clerk of the Colleton County Court,

Please bring to the attention of Judge Clifton Newman my concerns that the defense attorney (s) in the Alex Murdaugh trial may have committed a crime. It seems to me, his lawyers had to have known, before Mr. Murdaugh admitted he lied on the stand, that the videos were false and they did nothing to correct the record. This made them party to a lie, to deceive the court and jury and as so were part of a cover-up. If Alex had not decided to tell the truth (that he lied about his presence at the kennels), the kennel lie would have remained.

The reason I suspect they knew is that apparently, overnight Alex decided to take the stand and his lawyers did not ask for a 1-2 day delay to prepare their deposition of Alex. Alex was “guided” through his testimony by an apparently carefully prepared deposition – it did not appear spontaneous, as if the lawyers were surprised and did not know what to expect from his testimony.

So, when did the lawyers know the truth about his presence at the kennels? Was it during early interviews with Alex, during discovery and hearing Alex’s voice on the recording, during the trial when they heard his recorded voice? From the moment they realized their defense was going to be built on a lie, they became a party to a cover-up = a crime. Alex lied to the police = a crime. He lied to his family, friends and associates which is a moral failing.

I think Judge Newman should question the defense team before the trial starts Monday. If my suspicions are true: At a minimum the jury should be made aware that the defense attorneys have been part of a lie and they should be required to state so in public to the jury – and the jury to regard statements by the defense team in this light.

After the trial, the defense team should be recommended for disbarment by Judge Newman.

Sincerely,

Frank S. Archibald

Jay, this guy is tenacious. He isn't media. But feels like as a public citizen that he can have access to everything. Can you deal?

Hi Rebecca. Can I get copies of any and all audio/video that has been released to date to the media? Thanks

I've been calling since last week and only had 1 call answered by the deputy clerk who said she would call me back when she found out how it could be obtained. I still haven't gotten a call and I have you telling me to get it from courttv, andcourttv telling me to get it from you. Now you are talking about 10,000 of something that I have no idea what you're talking about. I'm general public but that doesn't matter because it's officially public records. So I don't know what you're asking about the 10,000 admission? 740-285-7065 can clear it up in about 3 minutes

Could you please attach the attached Order of Judge Newman to our Murdaugh Trial page?

Also, I need to put wording on there about public and media. If you could copy the below and paste.

We are entering our 3rd week of the Murdaugh Trial here in Colleton County. We ask for your patience and understanding upon entering the courthouse through security and seating in the courtroom. We have 3 outside groups of classes coming the rest of this week and seating will be very limited for the general public and some media. You are welcome to go to the Wildlife Center across the street if you wish.

Thank you,

Subject: Fwd: Meals in Colleton County for Murdaugh Trial
To: <dbeattyj@sccourts.org>

Dear Honorable Justice Beatty,

I come to you writing for support and explanation to my county finance and administration for the feeding and funding of 40 people in our courthouse for the Murdaugh Trial.

I received this email from our finance manager. At every turn, I have experienced questions on why I am doing things as a clerk of court. It's very petty, in my opinion that I have to be questioned for things regarding trial expenses for which I have a budget for.

Yes, this apparently has been termed "the trial of the century." It is being watched worldwide on television, YouTube, internet, podcasts, etc.

We in Colleton County certainly did not ask for any of this, but here we are trying our best to do what is necessary and accommodate the small circle that is involved in the courtroom.

We have a limited amount of time when Judge Newman says break and we are adjourned for an hour and 15 minutes. I am responsible for feeding 18 jurors, 2 bailiffs who watch over the jury, Judge Newman, his wife, his law clerk, his law enforcement detail, my 3 staff in the courtroom, me, my 2 court reporters, a media attorney who is here requested by the judge, 4 law enforcement who are security in the courtroom, the defendant and his 2 guards, court administration staff who is here, and an I.T. specialist who has been contracted in for the trial.

This kind of trial and it's process is large and quite frankly a new experience for us on this scale.

I am doing the best I know how in taking care in spending the tax payer dollars in the use of my budget to the best of my knowledge. If someone else would like to come in and take over, they are welcome to. I will hand over the accounts, the whole trial, the decision making process that comes with it, the complaints from the public, the media, my own County whom I feel pretty unsupported by, many of my staff, and I will gladly sit back and take a back seat, while someone with a much brighter mind takes the reigns. We have been planning for this whole trial process for 4 months. I was even tasked with searching for a hotel in the event the attorneys and judge would sequester the jury. I went to each hotel in my county and talked with the management, looked at rooms, saw each room with my own eyes, smelled for cleanliness , and talked about pricing in case of sequestration. It came down to one hotel, the Microtel Inn, and their management even was willing to block the entire 67 rooms all of December and much of January, until we found out 3 days before trial that there would be no sequestration. The Manager of Microtel was extremely disappointed of course, even though we talked all along about the process and the possibility of a sequestration not happening. However, we felt strongly all along that it would happen. Alas, it did not.

The Microtel has submitted a request to me of an amount to be paid to them for losing out on 6 weeks of rooms that could have been rented, that I need to submit to my county finance dept and administration, it is an amount for one night's rent of all the rooms, which I feel is only right. But we can address that later.

Currently, I'm disappointed that I have to deal with an explanation of 40 lunches for my courtroom personnel.

And one more thing, if I may, Judge Newman granted a motion yesterday and filed an Order granting the evidence of other crimes of the defendant to be introduced into this trial. So that means, our trial here will be extended to a further date. I'm going to be ordering lunches for quite a while longer.

I'm reaching out for support and help in this current situation I find myself in.

Please advise.

Your loyal and ever-learning Clerk in Colleton County,

Can you let me know why we are now getting 40 meals. My limited understanding is that we need to feed those who are not allowed to leave the courthouse like the jurors, the alternates, the defendant, the judge, but I can not come back to 40.

Thanks,
Jon

Grace,

Meet at the FC courtroom door, it's under a covered area facing the canopies of news media. 830 am. I will have several other groups meeting there as well. Law enforcement knows also if you have any questions.

Look forward to seeing yall in the morning.

Hi Harleigh,

Yes, you would be able to come. The courtroom opens at 8:30 every morning. Please remember no cell phone, no smart watches, no lap tops. You can bring a clear bag. Make sure you have your I.D. with you. Also maybe a small blanket. The courtroom gets a little chilly.

To: "Jon Carpenter" <jcarpenter@colletoncounty.org>, "Meagan Utsey" <mutsey@colletoncounty.org>

Jon and Meagan,

Back in November , per Judge Newman's request, he asked me to scout out hotels for possible sequestration of the jury. I did as he asked, and went to 6 main hotels within our Exit 57 to Exit 57 exchange, and found Microtel to be the cleanest, most efficient for a jury's needs, and the manager of Microtel, Gita Patel, was understanding of our needs and we talked extensively about the needs and concerns of a jury sequestration. At this point in time, all of us thought the jury would indeed be sequestered. Then, there was a death in Judge Newman's family and communication about trial and work ceased to exist for two to three weeks between us, the Court , and Judge Newman and his office.

Planning meetings still went on and were carried out with the expectation that a sequestration in a trial of this magnitude would happen. A week and a half out from trial start, we still did not have a firm answer and I was told by Judge Newman to proceed as if the jury would be sequestered and have everything in place. The Friday before trial, January 20th, a Webex meeting was held between Judge Newman, the attorneys in the case, and me as the Clerk. In this Webex, the attorneys and Judge decided on a partial sequestration, which would include the jurors picked to park in a undisclosed location every morning and brought to Court by 2 vans driven by county officers and the jurors would remain in the Clerk's custody until release at the end of the day.

The above e-mail from Gita Patel came when the sequestration was cancelled and Gita had blocked the entire 3rd floor of the hotel for all of December and 3/4s of January in anticipation of it. Understandably, Gita was a little upset, and many civilians outside of the Court realm do not understand how processes can change when a defendant set for trial decides to plea, or a jury set for sequestration gets cancelled when the attorneys and judge decide for it not to be; as was this case. Gita and I talked and I let her know that I would approach our administration to see if some of her time, efforts and money could be recouped, but did not promise her anything. She said she understood.

I'm forwarding this to you in hopes that we can come to a conclusion on this with Gita and the MIrcrotel Inn.

Kindest regards, I am

Becky

Respected Ms.Rebecca:

As per our phone conversation I am sending this statement with the number of rooms and the rates for one night. If you require the reservation cancellation I can e mail you them as well.
There were a total of 25 rooms blocked on the 3rd floor.

SNQ1 ROOM TYPE; 8 rooms at the rate of 125.99 plus 12 percent tax that total to $1128.88
SNK1 ROOM TYPE; 3 rooms at the rate of 125.99 plus 12 percent tax that total to $423.33
NQQ1 ROOM TYPE; 9 rooms at the rate of 100.99 plus 12 percent tax that total to $1017.90
PNQ2 ROOM TYPE; 1 room at the rate of 100.99 plus 12 percent tax that total to $113.10
NQ1 ROOM TYPE; 3 rooms at the rate of 100.99 plus 12 percent tax that total to $339.30

These are total 24 rooms, out of 25 total rooms on the 3rd floor room 324 was taken.
The total $3022.51.

Please feel free to call for any questions.Thank you

Sincerely

GITA PATEL

Let's definitely get together tomorrow and talk about this. I'm kind of thinking the wildlife center, due to the bigger size, but open to having the courthouse open for anything also.

Let's discuss tomorrow!

Ms. Hill:

I hope you are doing well and yall are doing a great job with the trial.
Judge Bonds called me and let me know to email you in regards to me and some friends getting in the trial on Friday. Initially I told Judge Bonds that 4 of us were coming down. One more has joined the trip. They are as follows:
Reaves McLeod
Colleen McLeod
Krystal Miller
Mo Donohue
Lauren Thompson

If 5 is too many, I will be glad to sit it out. If there is anything else you need from me please let me know. Also, please advise as to the best procedure for us to follow if you are able to help us.
I appreciate your help.

Yes, it's right across the street. Walking distance and food truck location.

We could have a courthouse AM group and a Wildlife center AM group, and then the PM Courtroom group and the PM afternoon Wildlife center group.

Hi there,
I'm a reporter with PEOPLE Magazine and I'm covering the Alex Murdaugh trial. I was wondering if you can confirm a few things for me?

Can you tell me if the judge admonished Buster Murdaugh after he made a gesture to a witness on the stand? Also, Alex Murdaugh's sister, Lynn, get admonished for passing her brother a copy of John Grisham book. If so, was the book confiscated? Did the judge ask them to move from the first to the fourth row?
Any help would be greatly appreciated.
Thanks,
Christine Pelisek

Hi Reaves! Good to hear from you. Hope you are doing well. Thank you for reaching out. We are trying to keep security tight and know who is in the courtroom at all times (to the best that we can!)

I am adding security to this email so they can have badges prepared for your arrival. Please remember no cell phones and please have your drivers license on you!

We will try to FastTrack you in. I would recommend arriving by 845 to 9:00. Judge Newman starts promptly at 930! We take a midmorning break and then read for lunch at 1, and lunch is usually until 215.

Look forward to seeing you.

Sincerely,

Susan, we would love for you to be here. I'm copying my security on this email and we will have a badge for you. I hope to get to talk to you as well. I would suggest being here by 830.

Parking: turn on Wichman Street off of Jefferies Blvd. Turn immediately to the right on Walter's street. It's one way. Halfway down on the right is a parking area you can park in. Walk down to courthouse and around to front.

Jennifer,

I will be glad to reserve seats. Please be aware that court MAY start later tomorrow due to the jury going out to Moselle. Just stay tuned to what the judge says.

Actually, since we know you are coming, we can have a badge prepared for you both and you don't have to stand in line at an early hour. When you come to Walterboro, you will find public parking down Washington Street mid-way, ,or you can turn on Wichman Street and immediately take a right onto the one-way street named Walter Street. A short way down this street on your RIGHT is a small area of parking lot and green space for parking. I would suggest this space to park. Then you can walk down and cross over Main Street and on to the courthouse.

Hi Jon,

Below are the staff and amounts for the March 17th spring bonus check request for the Clerk's Office if at all possible. If you could please calculate the amounts that would give the following people the written amounts.

Rebecca Hill $2,500.00
Laura Hayes $2,500.00

It's been so surreal ! I hope you've gotten to wind down a little. I will be glad to help you with the exhibits and the list you are needing. If you can wait until next week, I can help you personally. I'm out of town until then. Please let me know and let's keep in touch.

Take care!

Hi Becky – I hope you had a nice weekend and got to get some rest! I meant to grab you on Friday, but I thought I'd share that I put on the BBC radio broadcast Thursday night after the verdict to try to wind down and jolted up when they played a clip of you reading the verdict. (This was the morning news briefing for their UK audience.) I can't get over how surreal the last few days have been.

I also wanted to check with you about how I might go about accessing trial exhibits going forward. There were several written reports admitted that would be helpful for us to have copies of, but I wasn't sure if your office was keeping possession of them or if they'd been returned to the parties. Could you let me know about that? Also, does your office have a list of the trial exhibits that I could see? That might help me pinpoint what I need.

Thank you for your help on this and with everything else over the last several long weeks. It's appreciated!

Thad

Hello,

I live out of state and am wondering if I can obtain a copy of an exhibit from the case of State v. Richard Alexander Murdaugh (Case Nos. 2022GS1500592, etc.).

Specifically, I am looking for the item that was labelled as Exhibit 310. Please advise if this item can be emailed to me.

Thank you!

Of course, you all have them organized (and I assume locked away at this point) at the courthouse. We are wondering what we need to do to access those one final time? Mr. Leggett (cc'd) is an AAG with our office in the Legal Services Division and is the one handling these FOIA requests. Hello
My name is Kristin Whiting - Producer with Newsnation Ashleigh Banfield.
Wanted to know what the plan is for jury and press - post verdict.
We would love to be able to hand them a letter from us - asking if they'd like to speak publicly on our air live about the experience.
Thank you in advance for letting me know how you all would like to proceed. Appreciate all you do.
Sincerely,

There were several written reports admitted that would be helpful for us to have copies of, but I wasn't sure if your office was keeping possession of them or if they'd been returned to the parties. Could you let me know about that? Also, does your office have a list of the trial exhibits that I could see? That might help me pinpoint what I need.

Kevin and Meagan,

Would it be acceptable to y'all if we closed the courthouse early today at 1:00 pm?

My staff, the bailiffs, the deputies have all been working so hard the last 3 months, and especially the last 6 weeks. It would a gracious thank you for them to go home early and unwind. If not, I understand that as well.

You can do either of these:

Come at 845 to side door and we will give you badges to come back at 11 or you can come at 11.

Hi Ryan,

Thank you so much for your kind words! I am so glad that all of us came together and made Walterboro/Colleton County shine! Hopefully, tourism will increase! And to answer your question, yes, there will be some financial hearings held here....but we are really hoping Alex will make a plea deal on those. IF that happens, then it will just be a hearing. If he doesn't do a plea and wants a trial, then we will have a trial and all of the media will come back again. Judge Newman is letting me know when we will hear something either way on this.

Stay tuned!!

Take care!

I/m going to send you an updated transcript request form from SC Court Administration. The transcript process is a whole different process with the court realm. Court reporters and Court Administration have rules and fees they go by. Stand by. I will send you the form that was updated just recently.

And to answer your question, the digital copy is the same price as the printed version. Printed version would also have the postage added in to mail it.

Hi, p

Mr Wendell Butterfiled, aka Mr. B, IS TRULY the epitome of a true, southern gentleman who is also hands down the most conscientious law enforcement officer I've ever met and takes his duties very seriously.

Mr. B showed up every morning before time to report with his coffee in one hand and my sweet tea in the other! He takes pride in his uniform and the way he looks and is always Immaculately dressed with starched shirts and pants, a crisp blazer, a tie, and shoes that are shined, and a very similar likeness to a favorite and very loved actor of mine, Clint Eastwood. Would I ask Mr B to work another trial? Absolutely, no hesitation! He is my bodyguard and keeps all eyes focused on the task at hand. To know this man is to love him. I am so proud he is one of Colleton Countys finest.

It may not be possible, and I hope I'm not overstepping my bounds by asking (if so, I apologize), but I would be forever grateful if there was any way you could help me get inside. I've been sitting with Bill Young for most of the trial, but didn't expect to have this much difficulty getting in today! I'm currently with the press corps at the Wildlife Center.

Ladies,

I asked Carly Jewell, Creighton Waters secretary, about the arrest warrants for Alex Murdaugh. She had them. So I've forwarded this to Judge Cothran. Just wanted to let y'all know too and here is a copy for future reference and your records.

Hi Thad!!

It's been so surreal ! I hope you've gotten to wind down a little. I will be glad to help you with the exhibits and the list you are needing. If you can wait until next week, I can help you personally. I'm out of town until then. Please let me know and let's keep in touch.

Take care!

(This was the morning news briefing for their UK audience.) I can't get over how surreal the last few days have been.

There were several written reports admitted that would be helpful for us to have copies of, but I wasn't sure if your office was keeping possession of them or if they'd been returned to the parties. Could you let me know about that? Also, does your office have a list of the trial exhibits that I could see? That might help me pinpoint what I need.

Mrs. Hill, this is the last time I'll bother you today LOL. Below is a rough draft excerpt from the Moonshine chapter of the Fall of the House of Murdaugh. Your comments are in the second half in bold. Let me know if you see anything inaccurate or if you have a problem with anything, or want to add anything. Thanks!

The Whiskey Conspiracy Trial

The opening day of the trial would begin with a surprise twist: one of the defendants, Colleton County Deputy Sheriff David Carter, changed his plea and admitted his guilt after the government's first witness took the stand and leveled some bombshell testimony, while Thompson and Murdaugh maintained their innocence.

Mrs. Edith Thigpen Freeman told the court that she had been keeping accounts of "payoffs" from bootleggers to former Sheriff Thompson and former Deputy Lucas Hiott. Freeman also testified about the disappearance of $13,000 from her house during a Nov. 15,1951 liquor raid during which her husband, alleged bootlegger and co-conspirator Doc Freeman, was shot. She alleged that deputies Hiott and Carter had searched the house and the "bundle of money" was found to be missing afterward. She added that Hiott later gave her $500 and her husband $2,000.

As the trial heated up, it would go into night sessions and even weekend sessions.

During the second day of the trial, Mrs. Freeman offered more incriminating details, and a former federal agent offered backed up her story and placed the Colleton officers at the scene of the alleged liquor raid theft.

Malcolm Ewing, a retired Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Unit agent, recounted the raid on a 1,500 liquor still located near the old Walterboro Air Base. He testified that Thompson, Hiott and Carter were at both the liquor still and the nearby Freeman house several times during the day of the raid.

In cross examination by Murdaugh's defense team, Mrs. Freeman said that the money had been stolen from the pocket of a coat hanging in a closet at the Freeman home.

"Actually I do think Sheriff Thompson, Mr. Murdaugh and Lucas Hiott got the money but I can't prove it…" Freeman told Murdaugh's attorneys during questioning.

Also testifying that day were witnesses Alfred Moultrie and Joe T. Padgett, a former bootlegger turned commercial fisherman in Beaufort. Padgett admitted that he got into the "illicit whiskey business" in Colleton County in 1952. He testified that Colleton magistrate Berkeley C. Wood, also a defendant in the case, had introduced him to Sheriff Thompson.

"Thompson asked me how much I could pay a month and I told him $200," Padgett told the court on the stand. "He told me to go ahead and get a location."

Padgett later told the court that the corrupt officials demanded 12 cases of whiskey a month – half for the sheriff and half for the magistrate – and testified about other payoffs.

"Thompson told me if I could get $200 – that was $100 for him and $100 for Mr. Murdaugh – that he would see what he could do" to get light probationary sentences for two of Padgett's "helpers" who had been arrested.

During the opening days of the trial, another defendant, Robert A. McPeake, also pleaded guilty in order to get a reduced sentence.

The third day of the trial brought even more surprises and more innocent-to-guilty plea deals after tape-recorded evidence was introduced.

After the court heard from ten witness in the first two days, co-conspirator Robert Lee Varnadoe, charged with conspiracy and two counts of whiskey law violations, changed his plea to guilty. In exchange for the change of heart, Judge Hoffman dropped the two whiskey charges and just accepted the plea to conspiracy. Hoffman deferred sentencing for Varnadoe until after the completion of the trial.

The federal government then introduced a tape recording as evidence, over the protests of the defense counsel. The recording was purported to be a conversation between Oscar Phillips, a local bootlegger, and Sheriff Thompson that was made Sept. 22, 1955, in the trunk of a car in which the men were sitting. While prosecutors had hoped the recording would be more of a major factor in their case, the audio recording did not catch the entire conversation, and much of it was "very indistinct and difficult to hear." The judge asked the jury to consider only the parts of the recording that could be understood and not to "speculate" on the rest.

The strongest testimony of the day came from co-conspirator Lucius Evans, who testified that he had made two separate whiskey still operation payoffs to two Colleton deputies, and had paid another, Hiott, to retrieve a moonshine still condenser which had been seized as evidence in a raid.

As day three came to a close, the trail threatened to be a lengthy affair as federal prosecutors said they could call as many as 1,000 witnesses.

Toward the end of the first week of trial, ex-Colleton County Deputy Sheriff Ribbock Herndon testified that he gave Thompson $400 monthly in cash from retail stores and bootlegger payoffs. He also stated that any whiskey he received he would sell, then give the money to the former sheriff after deducting his own 20 percent. Even more shocking, Herndon told the court that he once gave Thompson four $100 bills from whiskey payouts while they were standing right in the Colleton County Courthouse, and shortly afterwards he saw Thompson give Murdaugh two of the bills. Murdaugh reportedly got "very mad" because the money was exchanged in Herndon's presence.

The second week of the trail opened with more government witnesses talking of "friendly raids" on liquor stills, and using paid informers and marked money to trace transactions, as Murdaugh's team prepared to launch its defense. Several bootleggers testified that they agreed to the friendly raids and entered guilty pleas in exchange for light fines to "help out" the officers with the grand jury and the citizens. There was even testimony by witnesses claiming they were paid to operate liquor stills for law enforcement officers. By then, the list of defendants was down to 21 after charges were dismissed against four, four entered early guilty pleas, and one defendant remained missing.

Murdaugh took the stand and his questioning was described by the press as "a battle of wits and tempers" between the accused solicitor and Irvine Belser Jr., Assistant U.S. Attorney, a "parry and thrust" game which became heated at times. At one point Judge Hoffman warned both of them and threatened Belser with contempt of court if the questioning again moved out of the agreed-upon "bounds."

The defense and the prosecution then brought forward witnesses that directly contradicted each other. The defense produced L.O. Browning, who testified that a bootlegger named Robert Clifton told him he intended to “get even” with Murdaugh for something. Clifton, a government witness, testified that he had never even met Browning or even seen him before that day in court.

The defense then produced a number of character witnesses who testified in support of Murdaugh, including Hampton County (Estill) grain elevator owner/operator Grover C. Bowers, who described Murdaugh’s “very good character.”

In response to Bowers’ raving endorsement, the feds introduced four character witnesses who testified against Murdaugh’s “reputation for truth and veracity.”

Final arguments began on Sept. 28, and the matter was set to be turned over to the jury on Saturday, Sept. 29, but faced with a Saturday night session the jury asked to wait until Monday to conclude the case and render its verdict. After the defense complained about newspaper coverage of the trail, Judge Hoffman urged the jurors to avoid reading any news reports over the weekend.

During the final arguments, the assistant district attorney described the indicted former public officials, including Murdaugh, as “a bunch of buzzards and vultures.” Murdaugh was again questioned at length by Belser about his alleged ties to the Colleton “whisky ring.” Belser then stirred up a “storm of objections” from Murdaugh attorney Henry H. Edens when he asked: “Did you tell Sam Carlton (a federal investigator) that you and Sheriff Thompson had been ‘kiting’ checks on each other’s accounts and that you stopped it only after you read in a newspaper that it was illegal?” The object was overruled.

In questioning, Belser drew from Murdaugh a statement that his law firm had once been paid $1,733 by one of the witnesses, Robert Clifton, for handling a whiskey case that went to the United States Supreme Court. That didn’t sit well with the court or the judge.

Murdaugh defense attorney Claud N. Sapp then called the government’s witnesses “a bunch of perjurers, thieves and convicts” and said the entire trial was an effort by these defendants to “get even” with Thompson and Murdaugh for having been harassed by law enforcement officials. At one point, Murdaugh’s chief counsel, Edens, told the court that “I can write a better indictment for the government’s witnesses than the government wrote for these defendants.”

As the case reached its third week, Judge Hoffman advised the jury that it must reach a verdict, or he would send them back over and over again, adding “This case is too complicated and lengthy to face a second hearing.”

The jury’s verdict came on Monday, Oct. 1. Murdaugh, along with two other defendants, was acquitted of all charges to join the four who had received early dismissals of charges. In addition to the five who had previously pled guilty, 17 more defendants were convicted, including former Sheriff Thompson, two of his deputies, including Hiott, and the former magistrate. One defendant, Harry Richards, was still missing or at large.

Judge Hoffman said he would issue sentences the following day, but warned all convicted law enforcement officials that they would be receiving penitentiary sentences.

Sheriff Thompson earned the heaviest sentence: seven years in prison and a $3,000 fine. The deputies and magistrate received three years each, and the remaining defendants got two years or less.

In the final day of the session, Tuesday, as he was hearing pleas for leniency for the convicted, Judge Hoffman had a few strong words for the acquitted, including Murdaugh. He described Murdaugh’s conduct as “grossly unethical,” including the fact that he represented accused bootleggers in other federal proceedings.

“I can’t get involved in Colleton County politics, but I notice by the newspapers that Mr. Murdaugh plans to go back into office as solicitor,” Judge Hoffman said in court. “He is an acquitted man and that is his prerogative. However, his unethical conduct – so grossly unethical by his own admission – was such that I couldn’t go back and face my people if I were he. But that’s his busines and the business of the people there.”

Neither Murdaugh nor his attorneys were in court that final day to hear these damning words, but Murdaugh later called it an “attack” and fired back in the press.

“I feel it was unwarranted and entirely uncalled for in every respect,” he said. “Because the judge’s comments are privileged, having been made in open court, I have no recourse.”

He added that representing bootleggers in federal court is a “standing practice” in this state and is authorized by South Carolina laws and had been for years.

The November 1956 U.S. Department of Justice Memo added further condemnation for Murdaugh:

“The defense resorted to some highly questionable tactics, all apparently designed to bring about an acquittal or mistrial as to Solicitor Murdaugh even at the risk of sacrificing the remaining defendants. Strange incidents occurred during the trial, which sorely taxed the patience of the prosecutor. At one time one of the governments principal witnesses, after having testified previously in court, came to the United States Attorney and told him that he had lied on the stand. Brought before the Court, however, he would admit only that his testimony had been erroneous in certain very immaterial respects which did not affect the issues in the case. Oddly enough, too, the foreman of the jury, immediately before the case was to go to the jury for deliberation, having received telephone call informing him that his father was dying declined to accept the courts proffer of release, although an alternate juror was still present and available to take the foreman’s place. It has been admitted by the foreman that he attended school with a brother of the defendant Murdaugh and in fact had dinner with him shortly before the trial began.”

“As result of this case, two obstruction of justice indictments have been returned and other allegations of misconduct with respect to the government’s witnesses are under investigation.

“Although acquitted, Solicitor Murdaugh was publicly castigated for his unethical practices by Judge Walter Hoffman…,” the memo added. “The Judge also felt it necessary publicly to call attention to the fact that it is a separate and distinct offense for anyone to threaten a person who has testified in court proceedings.”

The aftermath of the trial

Rebecca Hill, who was elected Colleton County’s Clerk of Court in 2020, had relatives who were swept up in the county’s whisky ring of that day. She says her grandfather, Felder Hiers, faced county charges as part of that combined federal and local investigation when a liquor still on the farm owned by he and his wife, Virginia Simmons Hiers, on Henderson Highway was raided. Like many rural families, the Hiers family had a history of making moonshine, and often enjoying their own product.

When the final verdicts were read, Colleton County locals like the Hiers clan didn’t take too kindly to going to prison while the big-name Hampton attorney was not punished.

“I remember them saying how unfair it was that the person in charge of all of this got off scot-free while all the minor people went to prison,” said Hill. “Fortunately, they got minor sentences, and then the liquor still was back up and running at some point.

Hill also recalls family stories about how the community reacted following the whiskey trials, adding that “A lot of people in town looked down on my granddaddy for what happened.”

One male relative, who was involved in the whiskey making but wasn’t arrested because he was a minor, wanted to date a local girl in town, but when her parents found out she was being courted by a known bootlegger they refused to let her see the boy. But the young couple didn’t let that stop them and were eventually married.

“True love found its way,” Hill added.

Love takes many forms. Federal officials could say what they wanted, but Buster owned the love and loyalty of too many hearts and minds – and votes – in the 14th Circuit. Needless to say, his supporters were pleased with the verdict, including the Hampton Grand Jury. In an Oct. 10, 1956, statement to The Guardian, the grand jury stated, “We commend Randolph Murdaugh for the splendid manner in which he has handled the affairs of the office of solicitor. We deplore the outrageous charges brought against him and rejoice in his vindication. We sincerely hope he will return to the office of solicitor in the very near future and will continue to serve in that office as long as he desires…”

On Nov. 6, 1956, Murdaugh was “swept” back into office during General Elections by a sizable majority in all five counties.

On Nov. 19, Gov. Timmerman renamed Murdaugh to his post as Solicitor of the 14th Circuit.

In early October, Alex G. Murdaugh, one of Buster’s first cousins, had been indicted on charges of tampering with the federal grand jury. The indictments alleged that this Alex Murdaugh, of Orangeburg County, attempted to influence a juror in the conspiracy case by telephoning Alfred R. Goodwin, who was the foreman of the jury, on Sept. 13 or 14 to arrange a meeting at a nearby Florence, S.C., restaurant. In December of 1957, that Murdaugh was found innocent in federal court in Florence.

In the September 1957 term of Colleton County General Sessions, Murdaugh got revenge against two of the witnesses and co-conspirators who testified against him in federal court in exchange for a lesser or dismissed charge. The solicitor pressed state charges against former deputy Riddick H. Herndon, a primary federal witness in the conspiracy trial, and former Jacksonboro district magistrate Herman M. Tuten, for violations of the state’s liquor laws as part of the Colleton County whisky ring – the same alleged crimes brought up in the federal trial. Both witnesses pleaded no contest to the charges.

Kayla,

We are doing the jury charge for jury and judge Newman will not allow anyone in or out.

However after the charge, the courtroom will be cleared and then a notification will go out if any notes come back from jury or when the verdict comes back, media will be notified to come back in courtroom.

Hope this helps. Just tell the front security that you are here taking the place of Holly and they will give you a red badge.

You are most welcome and I'm glad that I was able to help you during the trial. Thank you for your kind words.

Align must be a new way to connect businesses. The program takes your contacts and sends out a message to all. I'm still navigating my way through, but it appears to be legit. Seems interesting so far.

Kind regards,

I thought I'd follow up with you about this to see about getting a copy of the exhibit list and possibly coming out to pull copies of some of them. It's not super pressing, but there are some reports that were admitted that would be helpful for us to have going forward. Thanks so much!

Hi Thad!!

It's been so surreal ! I hope you've gotten to wind down a little. I will be glad to help you with the exhibits and the list you are needing. If you can wait until next week, I can help you personally. I'm out of town until then. Please let me know and let's keep in touch.

Hi Becky – I hope you had a nice weekend and got to get some rest! I meant to grab you on Friday, but I thought I'd share that I put on the BBC radio broadcast Thursday night after the verdict to try to wind down and jolted up when they played a clip of you reading the verdict. (This was the morning news briefing for their UK audience.) I can't get over how surreal the last few days have been.

I also wanted to check with you about how I might go about accessing trial exhibits going forward. There were several written reports admitted that would be helpful for us to have copies of, but I wasn't sure if your office was keeping possession of them or if they'd been returned to the parties. Could you let me know about that? Also, does your office have a list of the trial exhibits that I could see? That might help me pinpoint what I need.

Thank you for your help on this and with everything else over the last several long weeks. It's appreciated!

Thad

I can provide it all on an external drive if that works for yall.

Hi Becky – I hope you & your courthouse family are doing well! We sure do miss seeing all of you every day ?

I wanted to reach out regarding inevitable FOIA requests we are getting surrounding Murdaugh. Specifically, copies of the filed (unsealed) exhibits are being requested. Of course, you all have them organized (and I assume locked away at this point) at the courthouse. We are wondering what we need to do to access those one final time? Mr. Leggett (cc'd) is an AAG with our office in the Legal Services Division and is the one handling these FOIA requests. I wanted to connect the two of you so he can make a plan on the best way to go about this. He communicated to me he is willing to travel to Walterboro to complete the task of scanning & photo-taking rather than burdening your team with that task. Is this something that would be possible?

Like I said, Mr. Leggett is CC'd on this email for further correspondence. His office phone is also 803-734-3177 if you prefer to call him.

Thank you so much!

Good morning all,

I hope everyone is doing well and has been able enjoy a restful weekend. We saw that there was a new filing under Richard Alexander Murdaugh's case from yesterday (3/6). Would you be able to send us this filing when possible?

Thank you so much & thank you for all your hard work over these past few weeks. We would not have had such a smooth experience during such hectic times without good people like yourselves making it all possible.

Best,

I am going to go to the rental house today and take out some items I put in there.

Joe!!

You are so so welcome. It was a pleasure having you in the courtroom! I hope you gained a lot of knowledge from the proceedings in the trial of the century!!

Aubrey was so excited to meet you and have you sit by her. She tells me you two continue to talk and would like us to do a zoom call soon. I would love that!!

Hope you are back at your normal everyday routine and enjoying life!
We are now lifelong friends you know!!

Carpe diem!

I'm sorry for being stupid, but could you tell me what our balance is in the IV-D account ? ?

And can you send me what the ledger is of the 22-23 year so far?

Hope I'm making sense.

Thanks!

Hello Ms. Hill, I hope you are well!

I just noticed that there is a mistake on the letter I sent to you on Friday. I have corrected it in the version attached. Might you be able to share this version with the jury?

Additionally, I know Judge Newman is incredibly busy, but do you think he might be interested in speaking with us about this trial? It has truly sparked a national conversation, and he had such an important role in it!

I look forward to hearing from you soon.

All the best,

Monica

I am sure you are being inundated with media requests. I work with all shows across CNN's broadcast and digital shows and can help streamline things.

We want to be respectful of the members of the jury involved in Alex Murdaugh's trial, do you happen to know if any of them are interested in speaking to the media? Might we be able to send a letter to you that you can pass on to them so that they can get in touch with us if they are interested in joining us on CNN?

Any guidance on this would be greatly appreciated.

To: "Ann Whitten" <andyann@lowcountry.com>

Since the ending of the Murdaugh Trial, the CC Courthouse has been giving tours to tourists, locals who are still wanting to be involved and who have have invested so much time in watching the Trial of the Century.

Our Security department gives at least 10 tours a day. We've had everyone who comes in to write their names and where they're from. Each visitor is so interesting when we ask, "What brought you here?" A recent visitor from Montana was visiting their dad and stepmom in Myrtle Beach. They just HAD to come to Walterboro to see the courthouse and took a chance on seeing the inside by asking one of the bailiffs. They were so thrilled.

The courthouse is open from 8:00 am to 5 pm. As long as we don't have a lot of court going on, we are happy to provide tours, take pictures and answer questions. We have big court the weeks of April 17th, May 8th, and June 26th.

On another quick note....remember the ladies high school group that I've been invited to come speak at on Wednesday? We were talking about possibly having them commit to pre-ordering the book with promise of a signature. We need to figure out how much to charge. :) Paperback most probably Right. In perusing Bob Young's website and talking with him, he was an elected official and wrote his books and started acting. Of course, his books were historical and not trials. He said he just started writing about 10 years ago. That was encouraging that an older lady like myself can still do things!! Just a little history....as a child, I wanted to be a news person....but there wasn't much exposure to that and I spent a LOT of time in my lil southern baptist church and so music, teaching and missionarying was on the radar. Then, of course, I met Tommy and was going into my 3rd of college and transferring to Winthrop when he and I met and got my MRS instead of my BS. So finishing my degree is something I want to do. USC Salk offers the perfect degree in Organizational Leadership. So it's a BA instead of BS. LOL And I want to retire and live at the lake, Lake Marion because it's closer to my grandchildren, and because that's where I grew up going as my mom and dad had a lake home there. When parents passed away, I sold my portion to my brother. Now that he has passed on, it has gone to his daughter and we don't get to go anymore. We don't see grandchildren much now either, even though we live in the same town; Tommy and I love the upstate of SC, Lake Keowee, Lake Hartwell, so possibly would be open to upstate. Who knows? Only God does. :)

Some of these chapters still need finishing touches. Chapter 7 I'm still working on also. There are times when I have to move on to something new, something else, and come back bc my brian is on overload and i need to fully engage and be more in the story of certain things.

So I'm aware of all that, just wanted to "get it out there" to you so we could have a copy of it all somewhere else.

The train is on the track LOL

Good morning, Adoit!

I think my message I sent you when you were out of the office got lost in cyberspace. I apologize for that.

This week we are on the slow side and we have a term of GS court next week, so this week would be great if we can hustle that fast or we can look at the end of next week for getting the equipment together.

Yes, we had talked about keeping it, but honestly, it's a lot of money for my county right now and we did experience some issues with the technology. So I think it will be wise to wait until it comes to our county at a later date.

Hope to see you again soon!

Lori,

Here is the link for the Dropbox photos. I would like for you to check which ones are on the dropbox; then we will have to go back and scan in the ones that are not checked. Of course, the sealed ones cannot be sent out.

Then I have a thumb drive of the videos I'm bringing up to you to check off which ones we have of those.

Tomorrow if possible, I would like to see if you can scan in photos that need to be scanned.

Coming up now.

Hi Becky – I hope you & your courthouse family are doing well! We sure do miss seeing all of you every day ?

I wanted to reach out regarding inevitable FOIA requests we are getting surrounding Murdaugh. Specifically, copies of the filed (unsealed) exhibits are being requested. Of course, you all have them organized (and I assume locked away at this point) at the courthouse. We are wondering what we need to do to access those one final time? Mr. Leggett (cc'd) is an AAG with our office in the Legal Services Division and is the one handling these FOIA requests. I wanted to connect the two of you so he can make a plan on the best way to go about this. He communicated to me he is willing to travel to Walterboro to complete the task of scanning & photo-taking rather than burdening your team with that task. Is this something that would be possible?

Like I said, Mr. Leggett is CC'd on this email for further correspondence. His office phone is also 803-734-3177 if you prefer to call him.

Thank you so much!

Good afternoon, Gean,

Hope you have a great Easter Weekend. I'm messaging you to see about extra security personnel needed for working for the courthouse this weekend for the filming of the above flyer movie.

They will be using the courthouse on Friday through Sunday, from 7:00 am to 7:00 pm for the filming of the movie. I have Tracy Horvath and Tim Black who have said they could be here to work as security. I also have one bailiff, Cashay Catterton, who can be here as well. Please let me know if CCSO will approve their time for working the Friday extra hours and Saturday and Sunday. We could possibly need one more worker as well.
Please give me a call if you have any questions and want to talk.

Kind regards,

Also my bailiff here, Paul Bennett,, can do the banner for us. Remind me again, do we want my picture on the banner? Along with the Title of book, possibly the front cover drawing if I could get Jean to do a coforful drawing of it?

Right. In perusing Bob Young's website and talking with him, he was an elected official and wrote his books and started acting. Of course, his books were historical and not trials. He said he just started writing about 10 years ago. That was encouraging that an older lady like myself can still do things!! Just a little history....as a child, I wanted to be a news person....but there wasn't much exposure to that and I spent a LOT of time in my lil southern baptist church and so music, teaching and missionarying was on the radar. Then, of course, I met Tommy and was going into my 3rd of college and transferring to Winthrop when he and I met and got my MRS instead of my BS. So finishing my degree is something I want to do. USC Salk offers the perfect degree in Organizational Leadership. So it's a BA instead of BS. LOL And I want to retire and live at the lake, Lake Marion because it's closer to my grandchildren, and because that's where I grew up going as my mom and dad had a lake home there. When parents passed away, I sold my portion to my brother. Now that he has passed on, it has gone to his daughter and we don't get to go anymore. We don't see grandchildren much now either, even though we live in the same town; Tommy and I love the upstate of SC, Lake Keowee, Lake Hartwell, so possibly would be open to upstate. Who knows? Only God does. :)

Ed,

It was so nice to meet you this morning, along with Neil and Melissa. I look forward to talking with you more and working with you. I've attached the Colleton County Handbook for our county employees.

I will send more things as we go along.

Kind regards,

Rebecca "Becky" H. Hill

Some of these chapters still need finishing touches. Chapter 7 I'm still working on also. There are times when I have to move on to something new, something else, and come back bc my brian is on overload and i need to fully engage and be more in the story of certain things.

So I'm aware of all that, just wanted to "get it out there" to you so we could have a copy of it all somewhere else.

The train is on the track LOL

Good afternoon Ms. Hill,

It is my understanding from Scott Grooms that Colleton County is going to reimburse the city fifty percent of the cost for the rental of the Taj Ma Stall for the Murdaugh trial.

Please find attached an invoice for the 50% as well as a copy of the actual invoices the city received from Mr. Fix it of Walterboro, LLC.

If you have any questions or concerns, please feel free to reach out to me. Thanks and have a great afternoon.

Thank YOU for getting our courthouse on the right track for procedures such as this! I credit you for our smooth operation when the Bomb threat happened. We KNEW what to do and where to go! Also, for getting the fire marshall to give us the correct number of people load for our courtroom capacity so we would know how many other bodies could be in the courtroom safely. So many small things that provided HUGE help in our Trial of the Century!!!

Brian,

If you could put quotation marks around Behind The Doors of Justice" and if we could say Pre-Order Your Copy Now in a different color that still stands out. And where it says Alex Murdaugh swiftly convicted of murdering wife and son put Rebecca H. Hill and Neil Gordon co-author what went on behind the scenes of six-week Murdaugh trial

Would there be room enough to put that middle part?

Good morning, Adoit!

I think my message I sent you when you were out of the office got lost in cyberspace. I apologize for that.

This week we are on the slow side and we have a term of GS court next week, so this week would be great if we can hustle that fast or we can look at the end of next week for getting the equipment together.

Yes, we had talked about keeping it, but honestly, it's a lot of money for my county right now and we did experience some issues with the technology. So I think it will be wise to wait until it comes to our county at a later date.

Hope to see you again soon!

Sherry,

Lori is working on scanning in Murdaugh exhibits today. Can you please help get the big tub of exhibits for her and roll to wherever she needs them? Prolly get the green cart. She isn't authorized to go into the vault.

Thanks! I will be in about 20 mins.

Laura is out sick today.

Good afternoon, Adoit!

Yes, we will need to schedule a pickup of the equipment. I feel like it didn't achieve all that we had hoped. If at some point in the future it is presented to our county and the state pays for it, we will reconsider. But during the trial, we experienced a great deal of difficulty with the audio. So for now, we would like to schedule a pickup. Next week is a very good week as we are not busy with any court. Let me know what works for you.

I wanted to reach out regarding inevitable FOIA requests we are getting surrounding Murdaugh. Specifically, copies of the filed (unsealed) exhibits are being requested. Of course, you all have them organized (and I assume locked away at this point) at the courthouse. We are wondering what we need to do to access those one final time? Mr. Leggett (cc'd) is an AAG with our office in the Legal Services Division and is the one handling these FOIA requests. I wanted to connect the two of you so he can make a plan on the best way to go about this. He communicated to me he is willing to travel to Walterboro to complete the task of scanning & photo-taking rather than burdening your team with that task. Is this something that would be possible?

Like I said, Mr. Leggett is CC'd on this email for further correspondence. His office phone is also 803-734-3177 if you prefer to call him.

Thank you so much!

So, I like how he did it. Very, very nice.

One suggestion. It's not clear from a glance that it is a book.

How about using quotation marks and this:

"Behind The Doors of Justice Book"

Also is there a way for PRE-ORDER NOW to standout more---bolder or different color etc…

Hey Michael,

I hope this finds you doing well! I know you are probably busy, busy!

I am wondering if you would be able to help with some info on my grandfather, Felder Hiers, grandmother, Virginia Hiers, and uncle, Thomas HIers, who would have been the minor who was arrested in 1956 with the liquor still in Hendersonville. Things like why didn't they get indicted? And I don't think they went to jail....just arrested maybe and then released.

Could we talk by telephone tomorrow or soon? I"m not sure of your deadlines with the paper, your books, your family, and all you have going on. I so wish I could have asked more questions to everyone when they were still alive.

Good afternoon, Gean,

Hope you have a great Easter Weekend. I'm messaging you to see about extra security personnel needed for working for the courthouse this weekend for the filming of the above flyer movie.

They will be using the courthouse on Friday through Sunday, from 7:00 am to 7:00 pm for the filming of the movie. I have Tracy Horvath and Tim Black who have said they could be here to work as security. I also have one bailiff, Cashay Catterton, who can be here as well. Please let me know if CCSO will approve their time for working the Friday extra hours and Saturday and Sunday. We could possibly need one more worker as well.
Please give me a call if you have any questions and want to talk.

Kind regards,

So, I like how he did it. Very, very nice.

One suggestion. It's not clear from a glance that it is a book.

How about using quotation marks and this:

"Behind The Doors of Justice Book"

Also is there a way for PRE-ORDER NOW to standout more---bolder or different color etc…

Hi Blair,

Thank you for checking back with me on the expenses incurred for the Murdaugh Trial, the Trial of the Century. So far, we have a total of approximately $55,000. We are still awaiting a few invoices, such as the van rentals for the jury the entire 6 weeks of the trial. That should be coming soon. Just guesstimating that amount, I would say a total of $60,000.00.

And you asked about the hourly or salaried rate of different court workers. The court reporters get the same amount of money per day, whether they work a couple of hours or whether they work late into the evening. The courthouse staff, which included the Clerk's Office and the bailiffs and the Sheriff's Office are all hourly and got overtime pay.

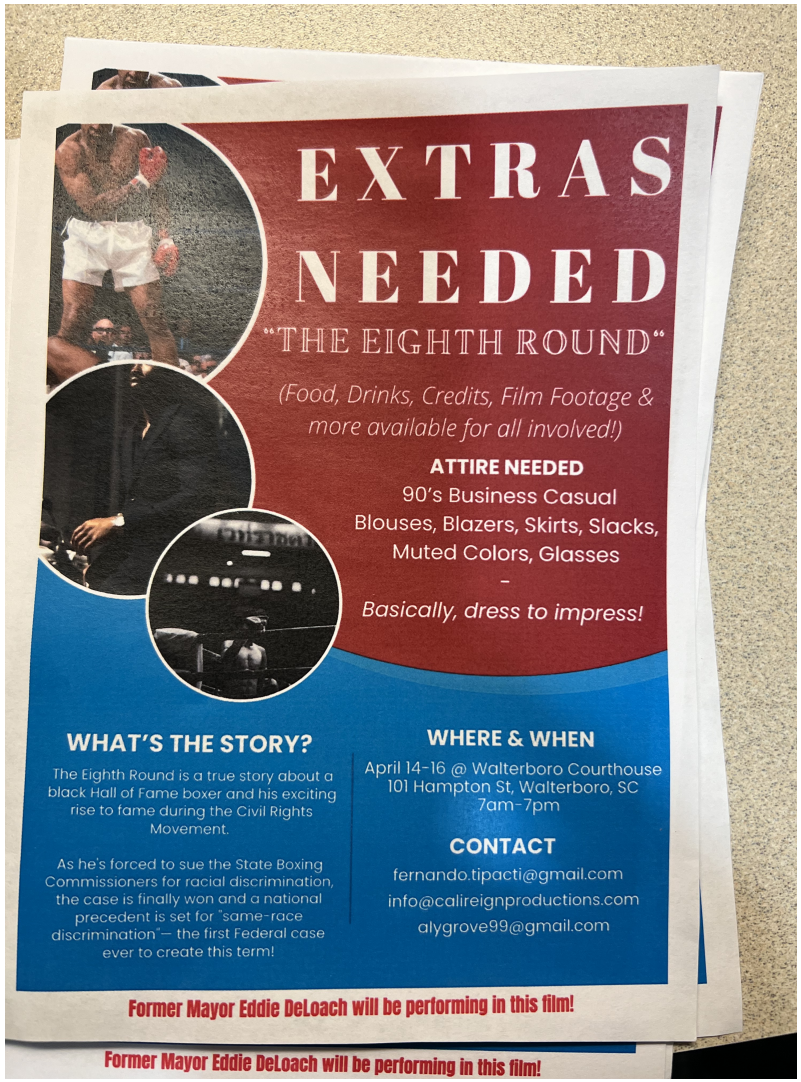
Hi Gean,

I have to say, our Easter dinner was very good as well. Ate too much, too much!!



I just got a message from Zeke Wilson who said that they should be able to finish all of the filming on Saturday by the evening, and they won't need to be at the courthouse on Sunday. So now it's just a few hours after 5:00 on Friday and Saturday from 7:00 am to 7 pm.

Hi Becky – I hope you & your courthouse family are doing well! We sure do miss seeing all of you every day ?

I wanted to reach out regarding inevitable FOIA requests we are getting surrounding Murdaugh. Specifically, copies of the filed (unsealed) exhibits are being requested. Of course, you all have them organized (and I assume locked away at this point) at the courthouse. We are wondering what we need to do to access those one final time? Mr. Leggett (cc'd) is an AAG with our office in the Legal Services Division and is the one handling these FOIA requests. I wanted to connect the two of you so he can make a plan on the best way to go about this. He communicated to me he is willing to travel to Walterboro to complete the task of scanning & photo-taking rather than burdening your team with that task. Is this something that would be possible?

Like I said, Mr. Leggett is CC'd on this email for further correspondence. His office phone is also 803-734-3177 if you prefer to call him.

Thank you so much!

Jean,

So I have Ben asked to go to Augusta next Friday for a book reveal party and trying to get prepaid book payments and advertise my book.

We were wanting to get a banner made with how the front of book may look. Here is the question.

Would you be able to draw up the front part of courthouse like a close up of the doors partially open upstairs, me standing up top by railing , and the stairs and columns, and then the whote space down below fill in like we talked about with Alec, Maggie, Paul and Bubba. Then the background ghosty pics of Randolph and Buster? Doesn't have to be finetuned or perfect. May have to be colorized though. Could you have it done by Monday afternoon? I have to get you pics of buster and Randolph. And how much would you charge for this?

I'm working currently on scanning everything in. I believe I will have it all completed by Wednesday, Thursday at the latest.

I can provide it all on an external drive if that works for yall.

Hi Becky – I hope you & your courthouse family are doing well! We sure do miss seeing all of you every day ?

I wanted to reach out regarding inevitable FOIA requests we are getting surrounding Murdaugh. Specifically, copies of the filed (unsealed) exhibits are being requested. Of course, you all have them organized (and I assume locked away at this point) at the courthouse. We are wondering what we need to do to access those one final time? Mr. Leggett (cc'd) is an AAG with our office in the Legal Services Division and is the one handling these FOIA requests. I wanted to connect the two of you so he can make a plan on the best way to go about this. He communicated to me he is willing to travel to Walterboro to complete the task of scanning & photo-taking rather than burdening your team with that task. Is this something that would be possible?

Like I said, Mr. Leggett is CC'd on this email for further correspondence. His office phone is also 803-734-3177 if you prefer to call him.

Thank you so much!

Good afternoon, Gean,

Hope you have a great Easter Weekend. I'm messaging you to see about extra security personnel needed for working for the courthouse this weekend for the filming of the above flyer movie.

They will be using the courthouse on Friday through Sunday, from 7:00 am to 7:00 pm for the filming of the movie. I have Tracy Horvath and Tim Black who have said they could be here to work as security. I also have one bailiff, Cashay Catterton, who can be here as well. Please let me know if CCSO will approve their time for working the Friday extra hours and Saturday and Sunday. We could possibly need one more worker as well.
Please give me a call if you have any questions and want to talk.

Kind regards,

Neil,

Yes, I've watched all 3 docuseries. I felt like the last one, the Netflix, was the best and accurate. There is so much being covered up....still. Will we ever know the truth? I'm not sure....something in me tells me Alex will tell at some point. I think somebody will. I haven't heard anything about any other series. From what I"m being told by lawyers around me, their opinion is that this case will not be granted another trial. Let's hope that's the case.

12 chapters by Sunday sounds doable. I'm working hard on this end.

Subject: Thoughts on Judge Newman's talk during sentencing
To: "neil studiogordonllc.com" <neil@studiogordonllc.com>

Sitting in the moment of the speech Judge Newman gave to Alex Murdaugh, there are so many thoughts that go through my mind. I'm aware of the Judge speaking behind me, the TV cameras eyes on us throughout the courtroom, the family of Murdaughs in the courtroom, the pensive stares of each and every person sitting inside the courtroom still in shock of the fact that the verdict against Alex Murdaugh was guilty.
My mind is racing with thoughts of paperwork that will need to be done as soon as the Judge sentences Alex. My ears go in and out hearing the words that Judge Newman is speaking to Alex. And Alex is standing right in front of me. Staring straight ahead. His brows are furrowed, intent, listening. No emotion whatsoever.

And I hear Judge Newman ask him if he has anything to say. Everyone, including me, is on the edge of our seat, paying close attention, hoping he will tell something, will admit to any hint of evidence. Will Alex confess? But we know that no defendant ever admits or confesses. The only thing Alex says is, " I respect this Court. But, I'm innocent. I would never under any circumstances hurt my wife, Maggie. And I would never under any circumstances hurt my son, Pau Pau."

The Judge knowingly says, "And I Know you have to see Maggie, and your son, Paul, during the nighttime when you're attempting to go to sleep. I'm sure they have to come and visit you. "
"All day and every night."
"And reflect on the last time they looked you in the eyes, as you looked the jury in the eyes." Within your own soul you have to deal with that.

I remember Judge Newman saying that the Murdaugh men and family had lived decades of drugs, lies and deception. That the Murdaugh family controlled justice in this circuit for over a century.

June 7th, 2021, you say it was just another ordinary day that wife and son were just enjoying life; not credible, not believable. You can convince yourself, but you have the inability to convince anyone else about that.

And Judge Newman asked twice, "When will it end? When will it end?" THis story is continuing to be written.....

As I sit and watch the sentencing happen on youtube, now I see and watch Alex's son, Buster, in the courtroom sitting on the back row of the front section of the courtroom. I am troubled by the unaffected way that Buster appears. He is emotionless. It almost seems as if he is irritated to be there and is so ready to be out of that courtroom and apparently has other matters more important to be tended to. He just acts so irritated to be sitting here.

I watch as John Marvin who is sitting right beside his nephew, Buster, is having a different emotional makeup on his face. He is affected. He shakes his head in agreement with everything the judge is saying, hearing the judge sentence Alex to two life sentences to run concurrently. John Marvin's demeanor is hugely sad, his eyes are downcast and I can see the love of a brother on his face.

Then I see Alex's sister, Lynn Marvin Goettee sitting on the same back pew of the rest of the family. She is the main reason the family was moved to that pew and was sent a warning through me as the Clerk of Court that one more action of breaking of the Judge's rules would result in being banned from being present in the courtroom.

Lynn's countenance is hard. She is listening intently to Judge Newman as he addresses her brother. Her eyes are cold. She is constantly on guard. Why? I can't answer that. SHe has been the architect of her own design the entire time she has been here inside the courthouse and inside this courtroom. At her request, the Court did give her and the family an office room downstairs to gather in during breaks and at the beginning of the day. She said she would be bringing her laptop to work on during the day for her job as a Victim's Advocate for the Solicitor's Office in Dorchester County. Lynn's job in that capacity gave her vast knowledge of all Court rules and the do's and don't's of dealing with victims and their families and the defendant themselves.

There is really no feeling she is exuding, except the best way I know to describe her is cold, hard, unapproachable, critical and important.

As I rewatched the Youtube presentation of the sentencing for Alex, I paid close attention to Lynn, John Marvin, and Buster. Lynn's facial expressions seemed to be disagreeable with the judge. Lynn actually rolled her eyes when Judge Newman announced that Alex's life sentences would run consecutive. I still couldn't believe there wasn't any sympathy or concern for her brother and perhaps compassion of the life going forward her brother would be living. I just didn't see any of that.

When will it end? I'm not sure it ever will.....

Good morning, Mr .Edwards,

I was checking my SPAM folder and saw your email about touring our courthouse today. That will be totally fine. We have some court going on, but let my bailiffs know that I said it will be okay if you go on tour. I would suggest coming between 12 and 2 for best results.

Hope you enjoy your tour! I am on the Colleton County Historical Society here in our town.

But in reality, he said, she was a "cost accountant" for a whiskey still run by her husband. His large still near Walterboro was raided by federal agents in 1951 at the outset of the case, and her record-keeping in a little blue notebook of his payoffs to local law enforcement was crucial evidence in the trial.

Then-assistant U.S. Attorney Bart Daniel responded to the same defense by saying he was sorry but no nuns were in the smuggling business.
Prosecutors didn't mind blasting Buster Murdaugh's character.
Belser told jurors: "This man Murdaugh used to be called 'Righteous Randolph' but now it's 'Bootlegging Buster.'
"If you want a solicitor who takes bribes, counsels bootleggers and takes part in deceiving the grand jury; if you want a sheriff and deputies who participate with him; and if you want bootleggers running rampant in your community, then bring in an acquittal.
"You should know, however, that a conspiracy of this sort is a vicious thing. It is a web, sending its tentacles out into the entire community. It starts with one or two; then three and four and five and ultimately drags in many people. A verdict of guilty will be a verdict against that sort of thing in your community."
U.S. Attorney N. Welch Morrisette Jr. called the conspiracy "a sordid, sorry, sinful mess. Jesse James rode a horse but this man Murdaugh rides a Cadillac with a low license number."
MurdaughMorrissetteWelch.US Atty.jpgA photo of chief prosecutor, U.S. District Atty. N. Welch Morrisette Jr. of Columbia that published with his obituary.
Assistant U.S. Attorney Arthur G. Howe said, "This man Murdaugh could have stopped all this in 1951 -- right after the still raid -- if he had carried out his sworn duty. He was duty-bound to report such things to the grand jury.
"Instead, he first tried to hush up Mrs. Freeman. Then he tried to get her little notebook away and then he refused to defend her husband in federal court because he was afraid the facts might come out."
MURDAUGH THANKS GOD
Verdicts came in at 9:45 p.m. on a Monday after two six-day weeks of trial.
Buster Murdaugh and two minor players in the scheme were the only ones of 30 original defendants to be found not guilty.
In a hushed and tense courtroom, Jack Leland of the News and Courier reported, "Murdaugh ... breathed heavily, drew his hand rapidly across his mouth and appeared about to break down when the judge intoned 'not guilty' after his name.
"Mrs. (Gladys) Murdaugh was in the first-floor lobby, downstairs from the courtroom, when an unidentified man raced down the stairs to tell her the news.
"She broke down and wept."
Murdaugh thanked God "that the jury brought in a true verdict, insofar as I am concerned.
"I appreciate from the bottom of my heart and will be ever grateful for the loyalty displayed by my many friends who have openly stood by me and my family during this ordeal."
GladysMarvinMurdaugh_HamptonHS.jpgA photo of Gladys Marvin Murdaugh, wife of Randolph 'Buster' Murdaugh, that was compiled by the Hampton County Historical Society in a book entitled "From The Salkehatchie to the Savannah - A Visual Journey Through Hampton County."
Seventeen defendants were convicted by the jury, five entered guilty pleas after the trial started, four had charges dropped by the judge, and one had not been apprehended.
Among those to be found guilty were the former Colleton County sheriff, two former deputies and a former magistrate judge.
The next morning, U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman sentenced the sheriff to seven years in prison and a $3,000 fine.
One former deputy was sentenced to four years. Another deputy and the magistrate judge were each sentenced to three years in prison.
The judge also sent an order to the local federal judge and district attorney suggesting "appropriate action" be taken against two uncharged prosecution witnesses -- a special deputy and a magistrate -- who testified to illegal acts while they were law enforcement officials, the News and Courier reported.
When a state senator pleaded for probation for a former deputy who had pleaded guilty, the judge insisted he must pay his penalty in a penitentiary.
"If you brought the president of the United States and his worthy opponent in here I would not do otherwise," Hoffman said.
MURDAUGH 'GROSSLY UNETHICAL'
Hoffman expressed disgust with what he saw in Buster Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit.
"I don't think you can stop whiskey making in Colleton County or in any county, but I don't think you'll have such a wholesale operation any time soon," Hoffman said during the sentencing hearing.
"This is a bad situation. The people in Colleton County began saying 'to hell with the law' and didn't worry about the law at all. You people still have a lot of work to do to get the law back to its proper place in your county."
Hoffman saved his harshest words for Murdaugh, who wasn't there because he had been acquitted by the jury.
"I cannot get involved in Colleton County politics but I notice by the newspapers that Mr. Murdaugh plans to go back into office as solicitor.
"He is an acquitted man and that's his prerogative and his business. However, his completely unethical conduct was so grossly unethical by his own admission in this court that I couldn't go back and face my people if I were he.
"But that's his business and it's also the business of the people there."
Hoffman.Walter.E.jpgThe photo of U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman that ran with his obituary.
Murdaugh's response through the media was combative, even suggesting he would sue the judge if his comments had not been privileged by being made in an open court.
As reported in an Associated Press story, Murdaugh was quick to invoke politics, and the Deep South's favorite bogeyman: "states' rights."
"When the federal government sends a Republican judge into this state to tell South Carolinians how to handle their politics, it's a perfect example of the further encroachment by the government on the rights of the states."
Judge Hoffman's main beef against Murdaugh was that he represented a bootlegger in federal court without prosecuting that crime at his own state level.
The judge said it was unethical.
Murdaugh said it "is a standing practice in this state. Further, it is specifically authorized by the South Carolina state laws ... a practice that has gone on for years."
MurdaughWhisky_MurdaughResponse.jpgNews clipping from Charleston's S.C.'s The News and Courier that appeared on Oct. 4, 1956.
'HIGHLY QUESTIONABLE TACTICS'
Hoffman's public statements were not the only complaints made against Murdaugh.
A week after the trial, Buster Murdaugh's first cousin, Alex G. Murdaugh of Orangeburg, was indicted on charges of attempting to influence a juror in his cousin's case.
The story about it shared the top of a News and Courier Sunday front page along with Don Larson's perfect game in the World Series.
The federal grand jury stated that a week before the trial, cousin Alex called the man who was subsequently named foreman of the jury that acquitted Buster Murdaugh and asked to meet him at a restaurant in Florence.
The indictment said he told the juror that Buster Murdaugh had been indicted "solely for political reasons."
A year later, a jury quickly found him not guilty. The jury foreman confirmed the facts of the indictment in court, but testified that it did not influence him.
MurdaughWhiskyCousinPC.jpgNews clipping from Charleston's S.C. The News and Courier on Oct. 9, 1956 when Buster Murdaugh's first cousin, Alex G. Murdaugh of Orangeburg, was indicted on charges of attempting to influence a juror in his cousin's case.
The jury foreman showed up in another blast at the Murdaugh acquittal. It came from the U.S. Department of Justice in Washington.
In a "United States Attorneys Bulletin" newsletter published by DOJ's Offices of United States Attorneys on Nov. 9, 1956, an ugly picture was painted of justice in Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit.
The document, reported last year by the FITSnews.com website in South Carolina, says:
"Before the trial, the court, over the strenuous objection of the government, granted the defendants' motion for disclosure of the names of the government witnesses.
"This was followed by very questionable practices on the part of some of the defendants and their attorneys during which government witnesses were threatened, attempts were made to influence them by promises of reward for themselves or members of their families, and at least one attempt was made to intimidate or influence the United States Attorney."
It said, "The defense resorted to some highly questionable tactics, all apparently designed to bring about an acquittal or mistrial as to Solicitor Murdaugh even at the risk of sacrificing the remaining defendants."
And it said, "Oddly enough, too, the foreman of the jury, immediately before the case was to go to the jury for deliberation, having received a telephone call informing him that his father was dying, declined to accept the court's proffer of release although an alternate juror was still present and available to take the foreman's place.
"It has been admitted by the foreman that he attended school with a brother of the defendant Murdaugh and in fact had dinner with him shortly before the trial began."
And it noted that "the judge also felt it necessary publicly to call attention to the fact that it is a separate and distinct offense for anyone to threaten a person who has testified in a court proceeding."

'REJOICE IN HIS VINDICATION'
But in the South Carolina Lowcountry, Murdaugh found quick support from his hometown Hampton County grand jury.
Within two weeks of Murdaugh's acquittal, the grand jury wrote to the state court:
"We commend Randolph Murdaugh for the splendid manner in which he has handled the affairs of the office of solicitor," the News and Courier reported.
MurdaughWhisky_HamptonPraiseClip.jpgOct. 10, 1956 news clipping when the Hampton County grand jury commended Randolph 'Buster' Murdaugh in his handling of the office of the solicitor and 'rejoice in his vindication.'
"We deplore the outrageous charges brought against him and rejoice in his vindication. We sincerely hope he will return to the office of solicitor in the very near future and will continue to serve that office as long as he desires."
Murdaugh did just that.
He ran unopposed on the November ballot and resumed his position in January 1957, taking over for Beaufort attorney G.G. Dowling, who had been appointed to fill the post after Murdaugh resigned a week prior to his trial.
Murdaugh held the position for 46 years. He left it in 1986, when his son, Randolph Murdaugh III, took over and held it until 2006.
Randolph Murdaugh III's son, Alex Murdaugh, who was a prominent Lowcountry lawyer, faces 79 charges for alleged schemes to steal some $8.4 million from clients.
Alex Murdaugh was a volunteer with the 14th Circuit Solicitor's Office on the fateful night in 2019 that his boat, allegedly driven by his drunken son, Paul, crashed into a bridge at Parris Island, killing 19-year-old Mallory Beach.
Alex Murdaugh and his father dashed to the hospital where witnesses were being treated.
They knew what to do.

Decades ago, a Murdaugh patriarch was the 'brains' behind a Lowcountry criminal enterprise

First of two parts

Minutes after his girlfriend was hurled to her death in a swirling Lowcountry creek, Anthony Cook spewed expletives about the young Murdaugh man he alleges was driving the boat.

"He ain't gettin' in no f---ing trouble," the Hampton County teen blurted toward a Beaufort County Sheriff's Office deputy in those chaotic wee hours three years ago.

Six young people were in the boat owned by Murdaugh's father, Richard Alexander "Alex" Murdaugh of Hampton County, then a powerful attorney who also volunteered in the 14th Judicial Circuit Solicitor's Office that his father, grandfather and great-grandfather ran for 86 years.

After the crash, the Murdaughs went to work immediately with a tried-and-true formula of brute power over the norms of authority.

Alex Murdaugh and his father, Randolph Murdaugh III, who has since died, were buzzing through the emergency room at Beaufort Memorial Hospital trying to manipulate a story line among crash victims.

In sworn testimony, Connor Cook, a boat passenger along with his cousin Anthony, would later say Alex Murdaugh told him that night to "keep my mouth shut and tell them I didn't know who was driving and that he's got me."

That was only the beginning.

Today, Alex Murdaugh's wife and the son who was on the boat were murdered, and Alex Murdaugh is in jail under $7 million bond, accused of 71 counts of stealing a total of $8.9 million from clients, associates and his law firm, as well as three other charges in an alleged botched murder-for-hire scheme.

It has turned the eyes of the nation to the low bottom of South Carolina. They wonder how our so-called justice system got this way.

Here's how.

Fair warning came 66 years ago.

The family's power could have ended when solicitor Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr. -- Alex's grandfather -- was indicted with 29 others in a federal case of widespread public corruption.

But by hook or crook, Buster Murdaugh didn't "get in no f---ing trouble."

COLLETON WHISKEY CONSPIRACY

Buster Murdaugh was a living legend in the poor southern reaches of South Carolina's Lowcountry.

He died in 1998 as an honored man whose portrait hangs in the Hampton County Courthouse along with his son's, Randolph Murdaugh III.

Buster Murdaugh was a stocky, outgoing man, the alpha dog in every courtroom in the circuit -- and that included the judges.

Murdaugh_RandolphBusterJrDM.jpegA photograph of a portrait of Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr., Solicitor for the 14th Circuit 1940-87 that is displayed in the General Sessions Courtroom A in Hampton, S.C.

He was known for courtroom theatrics, a mouth constantly full of chewing tobacco, and unquestioned control of all criminal cases as chief state prosecutor in Hampton, Colleton, Allendale, Jasper and Beaufort counties from 1940 to 1986.

With his pockets filled with indictments, he controlled what went to trial and what didn't, as well as when and why.

But in June 1956, the tables were suddenly turned on Buster Murdaugh. He was indicted by a federal grand jury in the bombshell "Colleton Whiskey Conspiracy."

Law enforcement in Buster Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit was revealed to be a criminal enterprise.

The grand jury's initial indictment list of 26 people included the Colleton County sheriff, three of his deputies, two former deputies and a magistrate judge, along with a host of bootleggers and businessmen. A second magistrate testified he was involved, but was not charged.

When Murdaugh was added to the indictment list later, he was accused of being part of a conspiracy that directed and personally profited from the flow of illicit whiskey on a grand scale in return for payoffs.

Testimony poured out in great detail, as The News and Courier newspaper in Charleston reported, showing defendants taking bribes, manipulating fines and staging friendly raids to falsely make it look like law enforcement was doing something about the rampant crime.

Also clinging to the case were accusations of tampering with jurors and witnesses, even the U.S. district attorney. The two key prosecution witnesses had to be protected by federal marshals during the trial.

Testimony showed that none of the corruption happened in a vacuum. Many hands were in the till. Disregard for the law was blatant. And the dirty laundry was aired for all to see.

JACKASS POND TO THE COURTHOUSE

The distillery that drew the U.S. Treasury Department's Alcohol Tobacco Tax Division into what became a five-year investigation was operating in an open field three miles outside of Walterboro, the Colleton County seat.

It was so large people referred to it as "Schenley's" -- the name of one of the world's largest legal liquor producers at the time.

Prosecutors said the conspiracy thrived with 32 moonshine stills that produced 90,000 gallons of illicit liquor over its investigation period.

Charleston was plodding through an exceptionally warm September when the fast-paced, two-week trial enthralled the Lowcountry -- even as another "trial of the century" was taking place in Beaufort for the Marine drill instructor who led his recruits into Ribbon Creek on Parris Island, killing six.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Arthur G. Howe of Charleston called the Colleton whiskey scandal "the most important case ever tried in South Carolina.

"It reaches to the crux of our government and our way of life. It reaches from the swamps of Jackass Pond into the Colleton County Courthouse."

And, many would say, it reaches into 2022.

BUSTER MURDAUGH NOT GUILTY

Buster Murdaugh walked away from Charleston's famed "four corners of the law" a free man, even though prosecutors said he was the brains of the entire operation.

The jury acquitted only Murdaugh and two minor players in the conspiracy: a plantation property manager, and a man from the Green Pond area who could find underground water supplies for bootleggers by using a dogwood branch.

But visiting federal district judge Walter E. Hoffman of Virginia saw enough to call Murdaugh "grossly unethical."

And a week after the verdict, a first cousin of Buster Murdaugh -- a man named Alex G. Murdaugh of Orangeburg -- was indicted on charges of attempting to influence a juror in the trial, according to news stories. He was found not guilty the next year, but testimony established that he met with the juror -- who ended up being the jury foreman -- and told him his cousin was charged only for political reasons.

MurdaughWhiskyAcquittedPC.jpgThe front page of The News and Courier on Oct. 2, 1956 when 14th Circuit Solicitor Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr. was acquitted of the whiskey conspiracy case

A number of other irregularities were reported by the Department of Justice after the trial.

Taken as a whole, the gavel-to-gavel coverage in The News and Courier (Now Post and Courier) by legendary Charleston journalist Jack Leland shows how a community can find itself in a cesspool.

There was a feeling of impunity, that any legal trouble could be fixed.

Leland's stories show jury manipulation, threats against witnesses, greed among the accused, state laws and legal practices that encouraged corruption, and a local grand jury kowtowing to Buster Murdaugh.

It was said in court that the Hampton County Bar Association had tried unsuccessfully to get Buster Murdaugh disbarred six years earlier for allegedly stealing from clients.

Murdaugh's single indictment charged that he conspired with a man to move an illegal whiskey still from Hampton County to Colleton County to avoid interference by local officers.

Murdaugh was found not guilty, but testimony showed him to be up to his neck in the conspiracy, even taking a cash payout in a courthouse hallway.

Bootleggers, who had to get permission from law enforcement to go into business, paid authorities in cash and/or cases of moonshine liquor bottled in clear fruit jars.

The prosecution leaned heavily on the testimony of a deputy who turned state's evidence.

And a little blue notebook.

'DON'T SHOOT NO MORE'

The scandal literally exploded shortly at 4 a.m. on Nov. 15, 1951.

A federal investigator just getting into the case raided an old barn near Walterboro. He discovered a hefty 1,500-gallon metal distillery, about 1,100 gallons of untaxed liquor and some 12,000 gallons of mash.

Reporter Jack Leland described the action as it unfolded like a grainy black-and-white movie.

The federal agent entered the dark barn, leaped over a man who was asleep on a pile of charcoal, then grabbed a second man as a third one burst through the tar-paper side of the barn and ran to a house about three-quarters of a mile away.

WalterboroWaterTowerDM.jpgThe City of Walterboro's water tower.

"I ran to the back door and this man Dock Freeman jammed a pistol into my stomach and told me to stop real still," the agent testified. "I told him who I was and started to reach for my badge in my pocket."

Freeman said: "If you put your hand in your pocket I'll blow your f---ing heart out."

The agent dashed to his car to get a shotgun.

"I saw a man appear at the window with what looked like a shotgun," he testified. "I fired at him. Soon he appeared at another window and I fired again."

Freeman, wounded in the stomach and head, staggered onto the porch, calling out: "Don't shoot no more, you've got me."

Suddenly, he turned and ran back through the house. The agent heard a car start. When it came racing around the house, he shot out both left tires.

After sending Freeman to the Colleton County Hospital, the agents dynamited the still.

What happened that night would blow up again and again in the face of the conspirators.

'WE FELL OUT OFTEN'

Buster Murdaugh rushed to the scene.

Prosecutors said it was because he was worried bootlegger Dock B. Freeman, who had moved to these parts from Georgia, would talk to the feds. But the Jasper County sheriff testified it was typical for the solicitor to report to the scenes of unusual shootings, no matter the hour.

Edith Thigpen Freeman, Dock's wife, had left her husband, who was living on the swampy side of the law. He'd already been arrested eight times for making moonshine. And by the time the Colleton conspiracy trial rolled around five years later, Dock Freeman was locked up in the federal penitentiary in Atlanta.

"I have never helped Dock make whiskey," Edith testified, "but I never reported him to an officer.

"We fell out often. It was so hard on the two children, him living like that. But that's all he knows. He can't read or write. My first child was five weeks old when I first knew he was in that sort of trouble."

Edith Freeman returned to Colleton County after the shootout, and would end up swatting down a thick cobweb of corruption in the Lowcountry.

She knew that her husband paid hundreds of dollars regularly to law enforcement so that he could produce illicit whiskey without interference.

And after his still was dynamited, Dock Freeman kept up his schedule of paying the deputy who was the "collector" for the sheriff.

But it turned out the sheriff had not expected the payola while the still was down, and it was discovered the deputy was not giving other parties in law enforcement their share.

That's when Edith Freeman started penciling in their payoffs in a little blue spiral notebook, evidence that would turn the case.

And she discovered something else that pointed to a sick level of Lowcountry corruption: $13,000 in cash was missing from an old Navy pea-coat that was in the house when the raid took place.

She would never see that money again -- or maybe she did.

MEETING MR. MURDAUGH

Edith Freeman kept cash savings pinned inside her dress.

According to testimony reported by the News and Courier, she had entrusted $13,000 to her husband when she left him. She testified $5,000 belonged to her and the rest was moonshine income.

When Dock was in the hospital after the shooting, he told the sheriff about the money.

Edith Freeman testified that two deputies told her they went to the house to retrieve the money and persuaded the federal agents to let them search the place. A deputy later told the sheriff he couldn't find the money, she said.

She assumed the federal agents found the money, and asked the sheriff to help her get it back. He said he would ask solicitor Murdaugh to help her.

"I had never seen Mr. Murdaugh before," Edith Freeman testified. "He came to see me and we sat in a car and talked."

A history of the Murdaugh family's powerful influence on SCFor more than a century, the Murdaugh name has stood for power and justice in South Carolina. How much influence have they historically had?

She was put out with the sheriff because she felt her husband was paying for protection that he didn't get. She said she wanted charges brought against the federal agent who shot Dock. And she told Murdaugh about the missing money.

When her husband's hospital bill came due, she asked the deputy they dealt with for some money to pay it.

"He let us have $500. When we got it, Dock and I were looking it over and I suddenly realized it was folded just like the money I used to keep pinned in my dress. We told (the deputy) about it and he said he'd gotten it from the bank and wanted to take it back to the bank. We kept it.

"Later, Mr. Murdaugh also asked if we would give it to him. He said he would have the FBI trace it but we still kept the money."

She testified that later, when the deputy and Murdaugh knew about her little notebook listing payoffs, the deputy asked her to give the notebook to him or burn it, and that Murdaugh asked her to give it to him. She refused, and later gave it to federal agents.

'BUNCH OF BUZZARDS'

When Dock Freeman got out of the hospital, they needed $5,000 for his legal defense.

She got $2,000 from the deputy and sold her car and other property for the rest, she testified.

The News and Courier reported that on cross-examination by Murdaugh's lead defense attorney, Henry H. "Hap" Edens Sr. of Columbia, Edith Freeman admitted that she "was 'very much hurt' when Murdaugh treated her brusquely at his office in Hampton and later refused to see her at all.

This occurred, she said, when she went to Hampton in an effort to retrieve a bill of sale for her automobile that she had given to Murdaugh.

In closing arguments, Assistant U.S. Attorney Arthur G. Howe of Charleston said, "She went up there to get back the only car she had left after that bunch of buzzards, vultures and so-called law enforcement officers had taken her to the cleaners."

He also told jurors: "This case wouldn't have broken, perhaps, except that these law enforcement officers and payoff takers got too greedy.

"They couldn't be satisfied with getting part of the payoffs. It was then that this illiterate bootlegger, Dock B. Freeman, got suspicious and decided he'd better keep a record of his payments so they couldn't shake him down twice. That little notebook resulted and started it all."

Edith Freeman testified she could never prove who took their $13,000 cash, but she suspected the local officials.

The judge overruled U.S. District Attorney N. Welch Morrisette Jr.'s request that the jury hear testimony that Edith Freeman had been approached a week before the trial in Augusta, Georgia, where she lived, by a lawyer who said he could fix up her husband's probation through a "friendly politician" if she would testify for the defense.

Edith Freeman was not the only person afraid she'd be double-crossed by the Colleton conspirators.

'I'LL HELP YOU'

Riddick Herndon was a 44-year-old retired U.S. Marine Corps master sergeant when he fingered Buster Murdaugh as a key figure in widespread public corruption of the 14th Judicial Circuit.

He was described by the Charleston newspaper covering the "Colleton Whiskey Conspiracy" trial as a "slightly bald, wiry and hawk-nosed former deputy sheriff."

As a volunteer Colleton County deputy he witnessed and participated in the bootlegging conspiracy.

After serving in the Corps for 20 years, Herndon came home to Walterboro with a $145 monthly pension.

He was repeatedly hammered by defense attorneys who said he cooperated with the government strictly because he would lose his pension if convicted of conspiracy.

Visiting federal district Judge Walter E. Hoffman of Virginia warned Herndon before he testified that any promise of immunity from prosecution he might have been offered wasn't "worth the paper it was written on."

But Herndon said, "I will testify regardless of what happens and without regard to any promise of immunity."

He said that after retirement he became a fishing and hunting buddy of the Colleton County sheriff, while living as a bachelor with his parents, who worked at the county jail.

He testified that in 1952, the sheriff asked him to go on a still raid. After the raid, the sheriff told him he could have two cases of seized whiskey for his "share." The sheriff allegedly sold the whiskey and gave him $36 for it.

"I had never had any connection with illegal whiskey before that and I was very much surprised that such a thing was going on," he testified.

From there, he would become an unpaid special deputy, and the sheriff's "collector."

Monthly collections ranged from $15 to $100, either in cash or whiskey, from distillers and retailers. Total collections were about $500 a month (equivalent to more than $5,000 today). He said he kept 20% and turned the rest over to the sheriff.

Herndon testified that in early 1955, rumors were rampant that a federal grand jury was about to return indictments against a group of Colleton County officials and citizens.

He said he heard that the sheriff and a magistrate had gone to see Murdaugh in Hampton, and he was afraid the sheriff was "getting ready to double cross me."

So he went to Murdaugh and confessed to "the whole system and all about the payoffs. I told him that the sheriff had promised me that as long as I stayed in the whiskey setup he would help me and would pay any fines I might get."

He testified that Murdaugh responded: "For God's sake keep quiet about this. If you need money or get in trouble, come to me. I'll help you."

'PEELED OFF TWO $100 BILLS'

The moonshine industry brought another stream of income to corrupt Lowcountry officials, according to trial testimony: payoffs after arrests.

Herndon testified he witnessed the Colleton County sheriff share payoff money with Murdaugh in a courthouse hallway.

The money came from an arrested bootlegger. The deputy said he had been instructed by the sheriff to tell the bootlegger it would cost $500 to get him a light sentence.

The deputy said he received the money in the judge's chambers while court was in session.

"I walked out of the judge's chambers into the hall," the deputy testified. "(The sheriff) came by and I gave him $400. I had been told to keep $100 for myself.

"About that time, Mr. Murdaugh came up and (the sheriff) peeled off two $100 bills and gave them to him and remarked, 'I wish I could get one like that every day.'

"The following day, (the sheriff) told me that Murdaugh had raised hell about him paying the money in my presence."

MurdaughWhisky_WitnessPayoff.jpgA news clipping from the News and Courier published on Sept. 22, 1956 that reported a former Colleton County deputy sheriff witnessed a $500 pay-off split between Randolph Murdaugh and a former sheriff.

A different bootlegger testified he approached the sheriff after two of his still workers had been arrested and faced trial in state court.

"I told him I was afraid one of the boys would tell all he knowed if he got a stiff sentence. He told me if I could get $200 -- that was $100 for him and $100 for Mr. Murdaugh -- that he (the sheriff) would see what he could do to get ... a light probation."

Another bootlegger testified the sheriff told him he could get a case "squashed" for $550.

But a circuit judge took the stand to refute allegations that Murdaugh worked out light fines or sentences for bootleggers who were paying officials. He testified that all his sentences and fines during the court session in question were typical.

'I'LL TAKE CARE OF THEM'

Officials of the 14th Judicial Circuit found yet another way to flaunt the law.

At one point, according to testimony, the head of the Colleton County grand jury started leaning on the sheriff and Murdaugh to do something about the illicit booze industry.

They responded with "friendly raids" to dupe the public and the grand jury.

The deputy who turned state's evidence testified that the friendly raids were Murdaugh's idea.

He testified that Murdaugh told him "to go back to the sheriff and tell him to get out and make some raids if only 'friendly raids' even if he (Murdaugh) and (the sheriff) had to pay the fines."

He quoted Murdaugh as saying: "For God's sake make the raids even if you have to warn them in advance, catch them and set up fines. I'll take care of them."

A Colleton County bootlegger testified that the sheriff arranged a "friendly raid" on his still, and a pint of whiskey was seized. He said he and the sheriff then drank about half of the pint and the sheriff took the rest away as "evidence."

In another incident, a still that was partially owned by the deputy who turned state's evidence was raided. A photographer was taken along and photos were released to the media.

"The News and Courier ran a picture of me on May 28, 1954, showing me wrecking my own still," he told the court.

In another instance, students were taken from the Cottageville High School vocational agriculture class to observe a friendly raid in action.

MURDAUGH ON THE STAND

Murdaugh took the stand on a fiery 10th day of the two-week trial.

He "denied flatly ever being associated in a whiskey conspiracy," the News and Courier of Charleston reported under the front-page headline: "Battle Of Wits Marks Murdaugh Court Appearance."

Reporter Jack Leland described a "tense verbal skirmish" between Murdaugh and assistant district attorney Irvine Furman C. Belser Jr. of Columbia. It was so ill-tempered the judge told them he'd get them boxing gloves to work it out the next week.

Judge Hoffman joined the rage when Belser mentioned Murdaugh's "income tax matters."

Defense attorney Henry H. Edens Sr. objected, and Judge Hoffman tore into Belser:

"You know that is inadmissible as evidence. I'll fine you for contempt of court if you continue. I'm not going to let a man be convicted in this court because of innuendo. ... These civil cases must not be used to infer anything. You can either follow my orders, or you can get out of this courtroom."

However, the prosecution gained admission from a Murdaugh character witness that the solicitor had previous troubles, although the testimony took place after the jury was excused.

"Have you heard about the Hampton County Bar Association efforts to disbar Murdaugh for lying and stealing from clients?" U.S. District Attorney Morrisette asked a prominent Estill grain elevator owner.

"I didn't know what the grounds were," he replied. "I did hear, about six years ago, that the county bar association tried to bring charges against Mr. Murdaugh but they never succeeded."

Earlier, the foreman of the Colleton County grand jury testified that the former sheriff's deputy who was a key government witness told him in the courthouse that he'd been lying throughout the trial.

After consultation in the judge's chambers, that was stricken from the record.

Murdaugh denied being involved with light sentences for bootleggers, and a state judge testified that Murdaugh made no requests in the matter.

Murdaugh was questioned about two payments he made to the sheriff.

He said a check for $1,950 was repayment for "investigations carried out for me in a civil case."

He said a check for $998.32 was to repay the sheriff for money he spent to take care of the families of men injured in accidents, which he said was the custom in his area.

MurdaughWhisky_MurdaughWits.jpgNews clippings from Charleston's S.C.'s The News and Courier that appeared on Sept. 28, 1956

Murdaugh attacked the testimony of Edith Freeman, a star prosecution witness whose husband was a convicted bootlegger.

He said she was enraged because she wanted a case brought against a federal agent who shot her husband in a confrontation after his still near Walterboro was raided.

Murdaugh said he told her to swear out a warrant against the agent, which she did.

He said he refused to prosecute the case because it involved a hassle between Colleton County officers and federal officers.

Murdaugh also addressed the $13,000 cash missing from the Freeman house following the raid.

He said he contacted federal officials in Columbia about it.

The News and Courier reported he "was told the Freemans were 'about the biggest bootleggers ever to come out of Georgia.' He said also that they denied any federal agent took the money and 'claimed the county officers got it.' "

Murdaugh was also asked why he would not bring state charges against an accused Hampton County bootlegger, although he represented him as a private attorney on those charges in federal court, earning his law firm $1,733.

Murdaugh responded that the man had never been indicted by a local grand jury.

That man was the bootlegger who testified that Murdaugh once advised him to move his whiskey still to Colleton County where he could operate freely -- the charge in Murdaugh's indictment.

He had been "identified as a long-time fishing and hunting friend of Murdaugh's until recent political differences," the newspaper said.

Murdaugh's secretary testified she had always known the man as a bootlegger.

Asked what he knew the man as, Murdaugh said, "A farmer."

Respected Ms.Rebecca:

As per our phone conversation I am sending this statement with the number of rooms and the rates for one night. If you require the reservation cancellation I can e mail you them as well.

There were a total of 25 rooms blocked on the 3rd floor.

SNQ1 ROOM TYPE; 8 rooms at the rate of 125.99 plus 12 percent tax that total to $1128.88

SNK1 ROOM TYPE; 3 rooms at the rate of 125.99 plus 12 percent tax that total to $423.33

NQQ1 ROOM TYPE; 9 rooms at the rate of 100.99 plus 12 percent tax that total to $1017.90

PNQ2 ROOM TYPE; 1 room at the rate of 100.99 plus 12 percent tax that total to $113.10

NQ1 ROOM TYPE; 3 rooms at the rate of 100.99 plus 12 percent tax that total to $339.30

These are total 24 rooms, out of 25 total rooms on the 3rd floor room 324 was taken.

The total $3022.51.

Please feel free to call for any questions.Thank you

Sincerely

GITA PATEL

I can do Wednesday night dinner. Would love to!

I've attached the photo that photographer has designed for book cover. It needs tweaking. I think it needs a diff pic of me, but I am very critical of myself and my looks.

Give me some honest feedback!

xoxo

Hi Becky,

Thank you for sending this along!

I am currently building the schedule for next week and would love to talk with you for a moment to see what would be the best time to meet you on Wednesday, May 10th. We were also hoping we might be able to stop by on the 9th, just to get an idea of the space to save time on the 10th.

Please give me a call at your earliest convenience.

Thank you!

Michelle,

Please find below two good articles on Randoph and his bootlegging legacy.

I am reading through the docs tonight and will send to you in the morning.

A whiskey conspiracy: How 'Righteous Randolph' Murdaugh almost became 'Bootlegging Buster'

Second of two parts

Defense lawyers spewed venom at those who had dared to cross the cozy law enforcement establishment of the 14th Judicial Circuit when solicitor Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr. was accused in a case of widespread public corruption.
Prosecution witnesses were called "a bunch of stool pigeons, self-confessed liars, convicts and bootleggers" in closing arguments of the two-week "Colleton Whiskey Conspiracy" trial of 1956 that ensnared some 30 officials, bootleggers and businessmen.
Defense counsel James P. Harrelson of Walterboro, who also was a member of the state House of Representatives as well as a Baptist preacher, called star prosecution witness Edith Freeman "Mrs. 'Pious Sanctified' Freeman." But in reality, he said, she was a "cost accountant" for a whiskey still run by her husband. His large still near Walterboro was raided by federal agents in 1951 at the outset of the case, and her record-keeping in a little blue notebook of his payoffs to local law enforcement was crucial evidence in the trial.
"This is really 'old grudge week' and these bootleggers finally got a chance to get even with these fine Colleton County people who have been giving them so much trouble," Harrelson said, according to coverage by the News and Courier in Charleston.
Another lawyer called prosecution witnesses "putrid and contemptible."
Defense counsel Claud N. Sapp Jr. of Columbia called the government's witnesses "a bunch of self-confessed perjurers, thieves and convicts, who have taken the stand here to get even with decent people who were only trying to do their duty."
Attorney Richard A. Palmer, representing Murdaugh, said, "The (federal Alcohol Tobacco Tax Division) agents have never said a word against Mr. Murdaugh. It is these thieves, liars and convicts you will have to believe if you are going to convict him."
MurdaughWhiskyIllioLEDE02.jpgNews clippings from The News and Courier from the 1956 Buster Murdaugh whiskey conspiracy case. Dates of articles, from left: Oct. 3, 1956, Oct. 4, 1956 and Oct. 11, 1956.
Another attorney representing Murdaugh, W. Brantley Harvey Sr. of Beaufort, then a former state senator and a relative of Murdaugh, told the court:
"Each government witness who tried to belittle Mr. Murdaugh had a very personal or political reason for doing so. There has not been one stigma placed against him by anyone of good character."
However, witnesses for the government who testified that Murdaugh's "truth and veracity" could not be trusted included former sheriffs of Hampton and Colleton counties, as well as the sheriff of Richland County, who was a former ATTD agent.
And the other key witness against Murdaugh was a retired U.S. Marine Corps master sergeant, a highly-trusted rank for the principal non-commissioned officer at the battalion level, and sometimes higher.
Murdaugh's lead attorney, Henry H. "Hap" Edens Sr. of Columbia, tackled the conspiracy charge as one that can hinge on hearsay.
He held out the prospect of the government using it to indict innocent people en masse.
"Suppose you go home and ask your wife how she feels," Edens told the jurors. "Under this law you could be indicted for conspiracy with her."
Edens said Murdaugh came out clean after six years of "being spied on, tracked and plotted against by people who wanted to get him."
'RIGHTEOUS RANDOLPH'
Prosecutors had a quick response to the character issue.
"I'd rather have a self-admitted, penitent bootlegger, thief or perjurer testify than to see this bunch of hypocritical liars, thieves and perjurers come into this court and hide behind a battery of talented lawyers," assistant Attorney General Irvine F. Belser Jr. said.

"You can't prove a bar-room brawl by having testimony from a Methodist bishop or a Baptist preacher. They wouldn't be in the bar in the first place. You have to fight fire with fire. You have to set a thief to catch a thief.
"The fact that you have bootleggers testifying in this case is because they are the only people who could have any real inside knowledge of the situation."
History would repeat itself in the same Charleston courthouse 30 years later during the "Operation Jackpot" trials. The U.S. Attorney's Office got scores of convictions in that $400 million marijuana-smuggling ring in the Lowcountry by using insiders as witnesses.
Meet the Lowcountry's gentlemen smugglers - a mini-trailerWatch an abbreviated trailer produced by Charleston's Black Bear Studios of kingpins Barry "Flash" Foy and Les Riley as they are introduced for "The Gentlemen Smugglers" a documentary based on the Operation Jackpot drug-smuggling story.
Then-assistant U.S. Attorney Bart Daniel responded to the same defense by saying he was sorry but no nuns were in the smuggling business.
Prosecutors didn't mind blasting Buster Murdaugh's character.
Belser told jurors: "This man Murdaugh used to be called 'Righteous Randolph' but now it's 'Bootlegging Buster.'
"If you want a solicitor who takes bribes, counsels bootleggers and takes part in deceiving the grand jury; if you want a sheriff and deputies who participate with him; and if you want bootleggers running rampant in your community, then bring in an acquittal.
"You should know, however, that a conspiracy of this sort is a vicious thing. It is a web, sending its tentacles out into the entire community. It starts with one or two; then three and four and five and ultimately drags in many people. A verdict of guilty will be a verdict against that sort of thing in your community."
U.S. Attorney N. Welch Morrisette Jr. called the conspiracy "a sordid, sorry, sinful mess. Jesse James rode a horse but this man Murdaugh rides a Cadillac with a low license number."
MurdaughMorrissetteWelch.US Atty.jpgA photo of chief prosecutor, U.S. District Atty. N. Welch Morrisette Jr. of Columbia that published with his obituary.
Assistant U.S. Attorney Arthur G. Howe said, "This man Murdaugh could have stopped all this in 1951 -- right after the still raid -- if he had carried out his sworn duty. He was duty-bound to report such things to the grand jury.
"Instead, he first tried to hush up Mrs. Freeman. Then he tried to get her little notebook away and then he refused to defend her husband in federal court because he was afraid the facts might come out."
MURDAUGH THANKS GOD
Verdicts came in at 9:45 p.m. on a Monday after two six-day weeks of trial.
Buster Murdaugh and two minor players in the scheme were the only ones of 30 original defendants to be found not guilty.
In a hushed and tense courtroom, Jack Leland of the News and Courier reported, "Murdaugh ... breathed heavily, drew his hand rapidly across his mouth and appeared about to break down when the judge intoned 'not guilty' after his name.
"Mrs. (Gladys) Murdaugh was in the first-floor lobby, downstairs from the courtroom, when an unidentified man raced down the stairs to tell her the news.
"She broke down and wept."
Murdaugh thanked God "that the jury brought in a true verdict, insofar as I am concerned.
"I appreciate from the bottom of my heart and will be ever grateful for the loyalty displayed by my many friends who have openly stood by me and my family during this ordeal."
GladysMarvinMurdaugh_HamptonHS.jpgA photo of Gladys Marvin Murdaugh, wife of Randolph 'Buster' Murdaugh, that was compiled by the Hampton County Historical Society in a book entitled "From The Salkehatchie to the Savannah - A Visual Journey Through Hampton County."
Seventeen defendants were convicted by the jury, five entered guilty pleas after the trial started, four had charges dropped by the judge, and one had not been apprehended.
Among those to be found guilty were the former Colleton County sheriff, two former deputies and a former magistrate judge.
The next morning, U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman sentenced the sheriff to seven years in prison and a $3,000 fine.
One former deputy was sentenced to four years. Another deputy and the magistrate judge were each sentenced to three years in prison.
The judge also sent an order to the local federal judge and district attorney suggesting "appropriate action" be taken against two uncharged prosecution witnesses -- a special deputy and a magistrate -- who testified to illegal acts while they were law enforcement officials, the News and Courier reported.
When a state senator pleaded for probation for a former deputy who had pleaded guilty, the judge insisted he must pay his penalty in a penitentiary.
"If you brought the president of the United States and his worthy opponent in here I would not do otherwise," Hoffman said.
MURDAUGH 'GROSSLY UNETHICAL'
Hoffman expressed disgust with what he saw in Buster Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit.
"I don't think you can stop whiskey making in Colleton County or in any county, but I don't think you'll have such a wholesale operation any time soon," Hoffman said during the sentencing hearing.
"This is a bad situation. The people in Colleton County began saying 'to hell with the law' and didn't worry about the law at all. You people still have a lot of work to do to get the law back to its proper place in your county."
Hoffman saved his harshest words for Murdaugh, who wasn't there because he had been acquitted by the jury.
"I cannot get involved in Colleton County politics but I notice by the newspapers that Mr. Murdaugh plans to go back into office as solicitor.
"He is an acquitted man and that's his prerogative and his business. However, his completely unethical conduct was so grossly unethical by his own admission in this court that I couldn't go back and face my people if I were he.
"But that's his business and it's also the business of the people there."
Hoffman.Walter.E.jpgThe photo of U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman that ran with his obituary.
Murdaugh's response through the media was combative, even suggesting he would sue the judge if his comments had not been privileged by being made in an open court.
As reported in an Associated Press story, Murdaugh was quick to invoke politics, and the Deep South's favorite bogeyman: "states' rights."
"When the federal government sends a Republican judge into this state to tell South Carolinians how to handle their politics, it's a perfect example of the further encroachment by the government on the rights of the states."
Judge Hoffman's main beef against Murdaugh was that he represented a bootlegger in federal court without prosecuting that crime at his own state level.
The judge said it was unethical.
Murdaugh said it "is a standing practice in this state. Further, it is specifically authorized by the South Carolina state laws ... a practice that has gone on for years."
MurdaughWhisky_MurdaughResponse.jpgNews clipping from Charleston's S.C.'s The News and Courier that appeared on Oct. 4, 1956.
'HIGHLY QUESTIONABLE TACTICS'
Hoffman's public statements were not the only complaints made against Murdaugh.
A week after the trial, Buster Murdaugh's first cousin, Alex G. Murdaugh of Orangeburg, was indicted on charges of attempting to influence a juror in his cousin's case.
The story about it shared the top of a News and Courier Sunday front page along with Don Larson's perfect game in the World Series.
The federal grand jury stated that a week before the trial, cousin Alex called the man who was subsequently named foreman of the jury that acquitted Buster Murdaugh and asked to meet him at a restaurant in Florence.
The indictment said he told the juror that Buster Murdaugh had been indicted "solely for political reasons."
A year later, a jury quickly found him not guilty. The jury foreman confirmed the facts of the indictment in court, but testified that it did not influence him.
MurdaughWhiskyCousinPC.jpgNews clipping from Charleston's S.C. The News and Courier on Oct. 9, 1956 when Buster Murdaugh's first cousin, Alex G. Murdaugh of Orangeburg, was indicted on charges of attempting to influence a juror in his cousin's case.
The jury foreman showed up in another blast at the Murdaugh acquittal. It came from the U.S. Department of Justice in Washington.
In a "United States Attorneys Bulletin" newsletter published by DOJ's Offices of United States Attorneys on Nov. 9, 1956, an ugly picture was painted of justice in Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit.
The document, reported last year by the FITSnews.com website in South Carolina, says:
"Before the trial, the court, over the strenuous objection of the government, granted the defendants' motion for disclosure of the names of the government witnesses.
"This was followed by very questionable practices on the part of some of the defendants and their attorneys during which government witnesses were threatened, attempts were made to influence them by promises of reward for themselves or members of their families, and at least one attempt was made to intimidate or influence the United States Attorney."
It said, "The defense resorted to some highly questionable tactics, all apparently designed to bring about an acquittal or mistrial as to Solicitor Murdaugh even at the risk of sacrificing the remaining defendants."
And it said, "Oddly enough, too, the foreman of the jury, immediately before the case was to go to the jury for deliberation, having received a telephone call informing him that his father was dying, declined to accept the court's proffer of release although an alternate juror was still present and available to take the foreman's place.
"It has been admitted by the foreman that he attended school with a brother of the defendant Murdaugh and in fact had dinner with him shortly before the trial began."
And it noted that "the judge also felt it necessary publicly to call attention to the fact that it is a separate and distinct offense for anyone to threaten a person who has testified in a court proceeding."
MurdaughRandolphBuster_HamptonHS.jpgA photograph of Randolph 'Buster' Murdaugh, far right, that appeared in a historical document entitled "From The Salkehatchie to the Savannah - A Visual Journey Through Hampton County" compiled by the Hampton County Historical Society.
'REJOICE IN HIS VINDICATION'
But in the South Carolina Lowcountry, Murdaugh found quick support from his hometown Hampton County grand jury.
Within two weeks of Murdaugh's acquittal, the grand jury wrote to the state court:
"We commend Randolph Murdaugh for the splendid manner in which he has handled the affairs of the office of solicitor," the News and Courier reported.
MurdaughWhisky_HamptonPraiseClip.jpgOct. 10, 1956 news clipping when the Hampton County grand jury commended Randolph 'Buster' Murdaugh in his handling of the office of the solicitor and 'rejoice in his vindication.'
"We deplore the outrageous charges brought against him and rejoice in his vindication. We sincerely hope he will return to the office of solicitor in the very near future and will continue to serve that office as long as he desires."
Murdaugh did just that.
He ran unopposed on the November ballot and resumed his position in January 1957, taking over for Beaufort attorney G.G. Dowling, who had been appointed to fill the post after Murdaugh resigned a week prior to his trial.
Murdaugh held the position for 46 years. He left it in 1986, when his son, Randolph Murdaugh III, took over and held it until 2006.
Randolph Murdaugh III's son, Alex Murdaugh, who was a prominent Lowcountry lawyer, faces 79 charges for alleged schemes to steal some $8.4 million from clients.
Alex Murdaugh was a volunteer with the 14th Circuit Solicitor's Office on the fateful night in 2019 that his boat, allegedly driven by his drunken son, Paul, crashed into a bridge at Parris Island, killing 19-year-old Mallory Beach.
Alex Murdaugh and his father dashed to the hospital where witnesses were being treated.
They knew what to do.

Decades ago, a Murdaugh patriarch was the 'brains' behind a Lowcountry criminal enterprise

First of two parts

Minutes after his girlfriend was hurled to her death in a swirling Lowcountry creek, Anthony Cook spewed expletives about the young Murdaugh man he alleges was driving the boat.

"He ain't gettin' in no f---ing trouble," the Hampton County teen blurted toward a Beaufort County Sheriff's Office deputy in those chaotic wee hours three years ago.

Six young people were in the boat owned by Murdaugh's father, Richard Alexander "Alex" Murdaugh of Hampton County, then a powerful attorney who also volunteered in the 14th Judicial Circuit Solicitor's Office that his father, grandfather and great-grandfather ran for 86 years.

After the crash, the Murdaughs went to work immediately with a tried-and-true formula of brute power over the norms of authority.

Alex Murdaugh and his father, Randolph Murdaugh III, who has since died, were buzzing through the emergency room at Beaufort Memorial Hospital trying to manipulate a story line among crash victims.

In sworn testimony, Connor Cook, a boat passenger along with his cousin Anthony, would later say Alex Murdaugh told him that night to "keep my mouth shut and tell them I didn't know who was driving and that he's got me."

Dashcam video: Survivor of Paul Murdaugh boat crash consoled in Mallory Beach's deathAnthony Cook, boyfriend to Mallory Beach, was one of six onboard a boat driven by Paul Murdaugh on Feb. 24, 2019. (Note: inaudible sound)

That was only the beginning.

Today, Alex Murdaugh's wife and the son who was on the boat were murdered, and Alex Murdaugh is in jail under $7 million bond, accused of 71 counts of stealing a total of $8.9 million from clients, associates and his law firm, as well as three other charges in an alleged botched murder-for-hire scheme.

It has turned the eyes of the nation to the low bottom of South Carolina. They wonder how our so-called justice system got this way.

Here's how.

Fair warning came 66 years ago.

The family's power could have ended when solicitor Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr. -- Alex's grandfather -- was indicted with 29 others in a federal case of widespread public corruption.

But by hook or crook, Buster Murdaugh didn't "get in no f---ing trouble."

COLLETON WHISKEY CONSPIRACY

Buster Murdaugh was a living legend in the poor southern reaches of South Carolina's Lowcountry.

He died in 1998 as an honored man whose portrait hangs in the Hampton County Courthouse along with his son's, Randolph Murdaugh III.

Buster Murdaugh was a stocky, outgoing man, the alpha dog in every courtroom in the circuit -- and that included the judges.

Murdaugh_RandolphBusterJrDM.jpegA photograph of a portrait of Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr., Solicitor for the 14th Circuit 1940-87 that is displayed in the General Sessions Courtroom A in Hampton, S.C.

He was known for courtroom theatrics, a mouth constantly full of chewing tobacco, and unquestioned control of all criminal cases as chief state prosecutor in Hampton, Colleton, Allendale, Jasper and Beaufort counties from 1940 to 1986.

With his pockets filled with indictments, he controlled what went to trial and what didn't, as well as when and why.

But in June 1956, the tables were suddenly turned on Buster Murdaugh. He was indicted by a federal grand jury in the bombshell "Colleton Whiskey Conspiracy."

Law enforcement in Buster Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit was revealed to be a criminal enterprise.

The grand jury's initial indictment list of 26 people included the Colleton County sheriff, three of his deputies, two former deputies and a magistrate judge, along with a host of bootleggers and businessmen. A second magistrate testified he was involved, but was not charged.

When Murdaugh was added to the indictment list later, he was accused of being part of a conspiracy that directed and personally profited from the flow of illicit whiskey on a grand scale in return for payoffs.

Testimony poured out in great detail, as The News and Courier newspaper in Charleston reported, showing defendants taking bribes, manipulating fines and staging friendly raids to falsely make it look like law enforcement was doing something about the rampant crime.

Also clinging to the case were accusations of tampering with jurors and witnesses, even the U.S. district attorney. The two key prosecution witnesses had to be protected by federal marshals during the trial.

Testimony showed that none of the corruption happened in a vacuum. Many hands were in the till. Disregard for the law was blatant. And the dirty laundry was aired for all to see.

Hi Becky,

Thank you for taking the time to talk with me today! As discussed, attached is a copy of our standard appearance and location release for your review and signature. If you have any questions or concerns, please don't hesitate to let me know. It looks like we are a go to film at the courthouse on May 10, 2023. We would like to interview Joe McCulloch there as well, but that might shift slightly due to the amount of time our team would like to utilize filming all the interior locations you mentioned.

We talked about how you were able to see a lot of events during the trial that were not shown in the filming. If there is anything you can think of that we should definitely know before going out, please let me know. I was thinking about it after we got off the phone and you might have some great stories that would help us build interview questions to make sure we don't leave anything out.

Thank you again!

I personally think my pic should be tweaked to be smaller to come under the open doors above, and the starburst that says photos unseen....should be way smaller.

Hi Becky,

Thank you for taking the time to talk with me today! As discussed, attached is a copy of our standard appearance and location release for your review and signature. If you have any questions or concerns, please don't hesitate to let me know. It looks like we are a go to film at the courthouse on May 10, 2023. We would like to interview Joe McCulloch there as well, but that might shift slightly due to the amount of time our team would like to utilize filming all the interior locations you mentioned.

We talked about how you were able to see a lot of events during the trial that were not shown in the filming. If there is anything you can think of that we should definitely know before going out, please let me know. I was thinking about it after we got off the phone and you might have some great stories that would help us build interview questions to make sure we don't leave anything out.

Thank you again!

-Michelle

Hello my handsome friend,

I am trying to help a friend of mine, Zeke Wilson. This is his bio.

https://www.theeighthroundstar.com/zeke-wilson

Reaching out to see if you might could help me reach the ears of Gov. McMaster and Sen. Graham and have someone in their circle call Zeke. He came to the courthouse a month ago and they filmed part of the movie he is producing about his life called "The Eighth Round".

He called me today to see if I could help him in any way get in touch with our Gov and Sen to see if they could present his Championship Boxing Belt to him next Tuesday, May 30th at 2:00 pm in Savannah, Ga.

What do you think? Can we make the connection happen?

Hi Carly,

I reached out to the court reporter, Elizabeth Harris, just to make sure. This is her reply:

Hey there! No indeedy. We handed over everything that was entered or marked for ID. If they didn't use it in any way in the trial, they never gave it to us, and it wasn't entered in the log. We left with our notes and that's it.

Hope this helps!
Have a great weekend!

Please find below two good articles on Randoph and his bootlegging legacy.

I am reading through the docs tonight and will send to you in the morning.

A whiskey conspiracy: How 'Righteous Randolph' Murdaugh almost became 'Bootlegging Buster'

Second of two parts

Defense lawyers spewed venom at those who had dared to cross the cozy law enforcement establishment of the 14th Judicial Circuit when solicitor Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr. was accused in a case of widespread public corruption.

Prosecution witnesses were called "a bunch of stool pigeons, self-confessed liars, convicts and bootleggers" in closing arguments of the two-week "Colleton Whiskey Conspiracy" trial of 1956 that ensnared some 30 officials, bootleggers and businessmen.

Defense counsel James P. Harrelson of Walterboro, who also was a member of the state House of Representatives as well as a Baptist preacher, called star prosecution witness Edith Freeman "Mrs. 'Pious Sanctified' Freeman." But in reality, he said, she was a "cost accountant" for a whiskey still run by her husband. His large still near Walterboro was raided by federal agents in 1951 at the outset of the case, and her record-keeping in a little blue notebook of his payoffs to local law enforcement was crucial evidence in the trial.

"This is really 'old grudge week' and these bootleggers finally got a chance to get even with these fine Colleton County people who have been giving them so much trouble," Harrelson said, according to coverage by the News and Courier in Charleston.

Another lawyer called prosecution witnesses "putrid and contemptible."

Defense counsel Claud N. Sapp Jr. of Columbia called the government's witnesses "a bunch of self-confessed perjurers, thieves and convicts, who have taken the stand here to get even with decent people who were only trying to do their duty."

Attorney Richard A. Palmer, representing Murdaugh, said, "The (federal Alcohol Tobacco Tax Division) agents have never said a word against Mr. Murdaugh. It is these thieves, liars and convicts you will have to believe if you are going to convict him."

MurdaughWhiskyIllioLEDE02.jpgNews clippings from The News and Courier from the 1956 Buster Murdaugh whiskey conspiracy case. Dates of articles, from left: Oct. 3, 1956, Oct. 4, 1956 and Oct. 11, 1956.

Another attorney representing Murdaugh, W. Brantley Harvey Sr. of Beaufort, then a former state senator and a relative of Murdaugh, told the court:

"Each government witness who tried to belittle Mr. Murdaugh had a very personal or political reason for doing so. There has not been one stigma placed against him by anyone of good character."

However, witnesses for the government who testified that Murdaugh's "truth and veracity" could not be trusted included former sheriffs of Hampton and Colleton counties, as well as the sheriff of Richland County, who was a former ATTD agent.

And the other key witness against Murdaugh was a retired U.S. Marine Corps master sergeant, a highly-trusted rank for the principal non-commissioned officer at the battalion level, and sometimes higher.

Murdaugh's lead attorney, Henry H. "Hap" Edens Sr. of Columbia, tackled the conspiracy charge as one that can hinge on hearsay. He held out the prospect of the government using it to indict innocent people en masse.

"Suppose you go home and ask your wife how she feels," Edens told the jurors. "Under this law you could be indicted for conspiracy with her."

Edens said Murdaugh came out clean after six years of "being spied on, tracked and plotted against by people who wanted to get him."

'RIGHTEOUS RANDOLPH'

Prosecutors had a quick response to the character issue.

"I'd rather have a self-admitted, penitent bootlegger, thief or perjurer testify than to see this bunch of hypocritical liars, thieves and perjurers come into this court and hide behind a battery of talented lawyers," assistant Attorney General Irvine F. Belser Jr. said.

"You can't prove a bar-room brawl by having testimony from a Methodist bishop or a Baptist preacher. They wouldn't be in the bar in the first place. You have to fight fire with fire. You have to set a thief to catch a thief.

"The fact that you have bootleggers testifying in this case is because they are the only people who could have any real inside knowledge of the situation."

History would repeat itself in the same Charleston courthouse 30 years later during the "Operation Jackpot" trials. The U.S. Attorney's Office got scores of convictions in that $400 million marijuana-smuggling ring in the Lowcountry by using insiders as witnesses.

Meet the Lowcountry's gentlemen smugglers - a mini-trailerWatch an abbreviated trailer produced by Charleston's Black Bear Studios of kingpins Barry "Flash" Foy and Les Riley as they are introduced for "The Gentlemen Smugglers" a documentary based on the Operation Jackpot drug-smuggling story.

Then-assistant U.S. Attorney Bart Daniel responded to the same defense by saying he was sorry but no nuns were in the smuggling business.

Prosecutors didn't mind blasting Buster Murdaugh's character.

Belser told jurors: "This man Murdaugh used to be called 'Righteous Randolph' but now it's 'Bootlegging Buster.'

"If you want a solicitor who takes bribes, counsels bootleggers and takes part in deceiving the grand jury; if you want a sheriff and deputies who participate with him; and if you want bootleggers running rampant in your community, then bring in an acquittal.

"You should know, however, that a conspiracy of this sort is a vicious thing. It is a web, sending its tentacles out into the entire community. It starts with one or two; then three and four and five and ultimately drags in many people. A verdict of guilty will be a verdict against that sort of thing in your community."

MurdaughMorrissetteWelch.US Atty.jpgA photo of chief prosecutor, U.S. District Atty. N. Welch Morrisette Jr. of Columbia that published with his obituary.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Arthur G. Howe said, "This man Murdaugh could have stopped all this in 1951 -- right after the still raid -- if he had carried out his sworn duty. He was duty-bound to report such things to the grand jury.

"Instead, he first tried to hush up Mrs. Freeman. Then he tried to get her little notebook away and then he refused to defend her husband in federal court because he was afraid the facts might come out."

MURDAUGH THANKS GOD

Verdicts came in at 9:45 p.m. on a Monday after two six-day weeks of trial.

Buster Murdaugh and two minor players in the scheme were the only ones of 30 original defendants to be found not guilty.
In a hushed and tense courtroom, Jack Leland of the News and Courier reported, "Murdaugh ... breathed heavily, drew his hand rapidly across his mouth and appeared about to break down when the judge intoned 'not guilty' after his name.
"Mrs. (Gladys) Murdaugh was in the first-floor lobby, downstairs from the courtroom, when an unidentified man raced down the stairs to tell her the news.
"She broke down and wept."
Murdaugh thanked God "that the jury brought in a true verdict, insofar as I am concerned.
"I appreciate from the bottom of my heart and will be ever grateful for the loyalty displayed by my many friends who have openly stood by me and my family during this ordeal."
GladysMarvinMurdaugh_HamptonHS.jpgA photo of Gladys Marvin Murdaugh, wife of Randolph 'Buster' Murdaugh, that was compiled by the Hampton County Historical Society in a book entitled "From The Salkehatchie to the Savannah - A Visual Journey Through Hampton County."
Seventeen defendants were convicted by the jury, five entered guilty pleas after the trial started, four had charges dropped by the judge, and one had not been apprehended.
Among those to be found guilty were the former Colleton County sheriff, two former deputies and a former magistrate judge.
The next morning, U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman sentenced the sheriff to seven years in prison and a $3,000 fine.
One former deputy was sentenced to four years. Another deputy and the magistrate judge were each sentenced to three years in prison.
The judge also sent an order to the local federal judge and district attorney suggesting "appropriate action" be taken against two uncharged prosecution witnesses -- a special deputy and a magistrate -- who testified to illegal acts while they were law enforcement officials, the News and Courier reported.
When a state senator pleaded for probation for a former deputy who had pleaded guilty, the judge insisted he must pay his penalty in a penitentiary.
"If you brought the president of the United States and his worthy opponent in here I would not do otherwise," Hoffman said.
MURDAUGH 'GROSSLY UNETHICAL'
Hoffman expressed disgust with what he saw in Buster Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit.
"I don't think you can stop whiskey making in Colleton County or in any county, but I don't think you'll have such a wholesale operation any time soon," Hoffman said during the sentencing hearing.
"This is a bad situation. The people in Colleton County began saying 'to hell with the law' and didn't worry about the law at all. You people still have a lot of work to do to get the law back to its proper place in your county."
Hoffman saved his harshest words for Murdaugh, who wasn't there because he had been acquitted by the jury.
"I cannot get involved in Colleton County politics but I notice by the newspapers that Mr. Murdaugh plans to go back into office as solicitor.
"He is an acquitted man and that's his prerogative and his business. However, his completely unethical conduct was so grossly unethical by his own admission in this court that I couldn't go back and face my people if I were he.
"But that's his business and it's also the business of the people there."
Hoffman.Walter.E.jpgThe photo of U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman that ran with his obituary.
Murdaugh's response through the media was combative, even suggesting he would sue the judge if his comments had not been privileged by being made in an open court.
As reported in an Associated Press story, Murdaugh was quick to invoke politics, and the Deep South's favorite bogeyman: "states' rights."
"When the federal government sends a Republican judge into this state to tell South Carolinians how to handle their politics, it's a perfect example of the further encroachment by the government on the rights of the states."
Judge Hoffman's main beef against Murdaugh was that he represented a bootlegger in federal court without prosecuting that crime at his own state level.
The judge said it was unethical.
Murdaugh said it "is a standing practice in this state. Further, it is specifically authorized by the South Carolina state laws ... a practice that has gone on for years."
MurdaughWhisky_MurdaughResponse.jpgNews clipping from Charleston's S.C.'s The News and Courier that appeared on Oct. 4, 1956.
'HIGHLY QUESTIONABLE TACTICS'
Hoffman's public statements were not the only complaints made against Murdaugh.
A week after the trial, Buster Murdaugh's first cousin, Alex G. Murdaugh of Orangeburg, was indicted on charges of attempting to influence a juror in his cousin's case.
The story about it shared the top of a News and Courier Sunday front page along with Don Larson's perfect game in the World Series.
The federal grand jury stated that a week before the trial, cousin Alex called the man who was subsequently named foreman of the jury that acquitted Buster Murdaugh and asked to meet him at a restaurant in Florence.
The indictment said he told the juror that Buster Murdaugh had been indicted "solely for political reasons."
A year later, a jury quickly found him not guilty. The jury foreman confirmed the facts of the indictment in court, but testified that it did not influence him.
MurdaughWhiskyCousinPC.jpgNews clipping from Charleston's S.C. The News and Courier on Oct. 9, 1956 when Buster Murdaugh's first cousin, Alex G. Murdaugh of Orangeburg, was indicted on charges of attempting to influence a juror in his cousin's case.
The jury foreman showed up in another blast at the Murdaugh acquittal. It came from the U.S. Department of Justice in Washington.
In a "United States Attorneys Bulletin" newsletter published by DOJ's Offices of United States Attorneys on Nov. 9, 1956, an ugly picture was painted of justice in Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit.
The document, reported last year by the FITSnews.com website in South Carolina, says:
"Before the trial, the court, over the strenuous objection of the government, granted the defendants' motion for disclosure of the names of the government witnesses.
"This was followed by very questionable practices on the part of some of the defendants and their attorneys during which government witnesses were threatened, attempts were made to influence them by promises of reward for themselves or members of their families, and at least one attempt was made to intimidate or influence the United States Attorney."
It said, "The defense resorted to some highly questionable tactics, all apparently designed to bring about an acquittal or mistrial as to Solicitor Murdaugh even at the risk of sacrificing the remaining defendants."
And it said, "Oddly enough, too, the foreman of the jury, immediately before the case was to go to the jury for deliberation, having received a telephone call informing him that his father was dying, declined to accept the court's proffer of release although an alternate juror was still present and available to take the foreman's place.
"It has been admitted by the foreman that he attended school with a brother of the defendant Murdaugh and in fact had dinner with him shortly before the trial began."
And it noted that "the judge also felt it necessary publicly to call attention to the fact that it is a separate and distinct offense for anyone to threaten a person who has testified in a court proceeding."
MurdaughRandolphBuster_HamptonHS.jpgA photograph of Randolph 'Buster' Murdaugh, far right, that appeared in a historical document entitled "From The Salkehatchie to the Savannah - A Visual Journey Through Hampton County" compiled by the Hampton County Historical Society.
'REJOICE IN HIS VINDICATION'
But in the South Carolina Lowcountry, Murdaugh found quick support from his hometown Hampton County grand jury.
Within two weeks of Murdaugh's acquittal, the grand jury wrote to the state court:
"We commend Randolph Murdaugh for the splendid manner in which he has handled the affairs of the office of solicitor," the News and Courier reported.
MurdaughWhisky_HamptonPraiseClip.jpgOct. 10, 1956 news clipping when the Hampton County grand jury commended Randolph 'Buster' Murdaugh in his handling of the office of the solicitor and 'rejoice in his vindication.'
"We deplore the outrageous charges brought against him and rejoice in his vindication. We sincerely hope he will return to the office of solicitor in the very near future and will continue to serve that office as long as he desires."

Murdaugh did just that.
He ran unopposed on the November ballot and resumed his position in January 1957, taking over for Beaufort attorney G.G. Dowling, who had been appointed to fill the post after Murdaugh resigned a week prior to his trial.
Murdaugh held the position for 46 years. He left it in 1986, when his son, Randolph Murdaugh III, took over and held it until 2006.
Randolph Murdaugh III's son, Alex Murdaugh, who was a prominent Lowcountry lawyer, faces 79 charges for alleged schemes to steal some $8.4 million from clients.
Alex Murdaugh was a volunteer with the 14th Circuit Solicitor's Office on the fateful night in 2019 that his boat, allegedly driven by his drunken son, Paul, crashed into a bridge at Parris Island, killing 19-year-old Mallory Beach.
Alex Murdaugh and his father dashed to the hospital where witnesses were being treated.
They knew what to do.

First of two parts

Minutes after his girlfriend was hurled to her death in a swirling Lowcountry creek, Anthony Cook spewed expletives about the young Murdaugh man he alleges was driving the boat.
"He ain't gettin' in no f---ing trouble," the Hampton County teen blurted toward a Beaufort County Sheriff's Office deputy in those chaotic wee hours three years ago.
Six young people were in the boat owned by Murdaugh's father, Richard Alexander "Alex" Murdaugh of Hampton County, then a powerful attorney who also volunteered in the 14th Judicial Circuit Solicitor's Office that his father, grandfather and great-grandfather ran for 86 years.
After the crash, the Murdaughs went to work immediately with a tried-and-true formula of brute power over the norms of authority.
Alex Murdaugh and his father, Randolph Murdaugh III, who has since died, were buzzing through the emergency room at Beaufort Memorial Hospital trying to manipulate a story line among crash victims.
In sworn testimony, Connor Cook, a boat passenger along with his cousin Anthony, would later say Alex Murdaugh told him that night to "keep my mouth shut and tell them I didn't know who was driving and that he's got me."
Dashcam video: Survivor of Paul Murdaugh boat crash consoled in Mallory Beach's deathAnthony Cook, boyfriend to Mallory Beach, was one of six onboard a boat driven by Paul Murdaugh on Feb. 24, 2019. (Note: inaudible sound)
That was only the beginning.
Today, Alex Murdaugh's wife and the son who was on the boat were murdered, and Alex Murdaugh is in jail under $7 million bond, accused of 71 counts of stealing a total of $8.9 million from clients, associates and his law firm, as well as three other charges in an alleged botched murder-for-hire scheme.
It has turned the eyes of the nation to the low bottom of South Carolina. They wonder how our so-called justice system got this way.
Here's how.
Fair warning came 66 years ago.
The family's power could have ended when solicitor Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr. -- Alex's grandfather -- was indicted with 29 others in a federal case of widespread public corruption.
But by hook or crook, Buster Murdaugh didn't "get in no f---ing trouble."
COLLETON WHISKEY CONSPIRACY
Buster Murdaugh was a living legend in the poor southern reaches of South Carolina's Lowcountry.
He died in 1998 as an honored man whose portrait hangs in the Hampton County Courthouse along with his son's, Randolph Murdaugh III.
Buster Murdaugh was a stocky, outgoing man, the alpha dog in every courtroom in the circuit -- and that included the judges.
Murdaugh_RandolphBusterJrDM.jpegA photograph of a portrait of Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr., Solicitor for the 14th Circuit 1940-87 that is displayed in the General Sessions Courtroom A in Hampton, S.C.
He was known for courtroom theatrics, a mouth constantly full of chewing tobacco, and unquestioned control of all criminal cases as chief state prosecutor in Hampton, Colleton, Allendale, Jasper and Beaufort counties from 1940 to 1986.
With his pockets filled with indictments, he controlled what went to trial and what didn't, as well as when and why.
But in June 1956, the tables were suddenly turned on Buster Murdaugh. He was indicted by a federal grand jury in the bombshell "Colleton Whiskey Conspiracy."
Law enforcement in Buster Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit was revealed to be a criminal enterprise.
The grand jury's initial indictment list of 26 people included the Colleton County sheriff, three of his deputies, two former deputies and a magistrate judge, along with a host of bootleggers and businessmen. A second magistrate testified he was involved, but was not charged.
When Murdaugh was added to the indictment list later, he was accused of being part of a conspiracy that directed and personally profited from the flow of illicit whiskey on a grand scale in return for payoffs.
Testimony poured out in great detail, as The News and Courier newspaper in Charleston reported, showing defendants taking bribes, manipulating fines and staging friendly raids to falsely make it look like law enforcement was doing something about the rampant crime.
Also clinging to the case were accusations of tampering with jurors and witnesses, even the U.S. district attorney. The two key prosecution witnesses had to be protected by federal marshals during the trial.
Testimony showed that none of the corruption happened in a vacuum. Many hands were in the till. Disregard for the law was blatant. And the dirty laundry was aired for all to see.

We would like to interview Joe McCulloch there as well, but that might shift slightly due to the amount of time our team would like to utilize filming all the interior locations you mentioned.

I have a question about the writing of a book by a clerk of court about the process of trial from beginning to end, Focusing on the process itself the history of it and of course the High profile cases that South Carolina has had. What would be the ethic procedures behind this?

Ms. Williams,

Please find attached an order confirming the sealing of the Greene and McDowell body cam footage. The portions of the video displaying the victims was considered and treated as sealed during trial by the parties and this is to ensure they remain so.

Hi Miss Becky!

Here is the link with the crime scene photos for you!
https://www.dropbox.com/scl/fo/bfmq4sf8ufjstrhy83yfc/h?dl=0&rlkey=bc0yypd124jtxm61b6z38jpzl

Just a reminder, none of the exhibits that were sealed are in this folder. We did not scan any of those exhibits.

Do you also need the videos? I can send you those too!

Miss you!!

Hi Alex!

I hope you are doing well! It's already May 2023!

I went in and deleted the photos of Murdaugh Crime Scene out of my Dropbox to make room. Saved them to a thumb drive at the office. Now, however, I am at a SC Clerk of Court's Conference and find that I need to access them for a talk they want me to give! Would you be able to send me the Dropbox link again? I am forever indebted to you!!

Yes, I did. I did. I am working on getting that together. If I don't send by tomorrow, I will have my staff send on Monday. We may have to put everything on a thumb drive. I was hoping we could send through DropBox, but it's going to be close to a terabyte or two of information. If we do the thumb drive, would you want to come pick it up or mail it?

Yes, it does sound one-sided. I will do what you suggested. If there is anything else, let me know.

If you have any questions or concerns, please don't hesitate to let me know. It looks like we are a go to film at the courthouse on May 10, 2023. We would like to interview Joe McCulloch there as well, but that might shift slightly due to the amount of time our team would like to utilize filming all the interior locations you mentioned.

Good morning, Sarah!

I've copied Mike Gasparro on this email. He is with Netflix and will be coming to town this weekend and is interested in talking with you about the Bedon Lucas House.

I wanted to connect yall. I am away at a conference and will be back in town on Sunday.

Best,

Yes, I did. I did. I am working on getting that together. If I don't send by tomorrow, I will have my staff send on Monday. We may have to put everything on a thumb drive. I was hoping we could send through DropBox, but it's going to be close to a terabyte or two of information. If we do the thumb drive, would you want to come pick it up or mail it?

Mike,

I'm at a hearing in Columbia at present with the defense team and the AG's office with Judge Newman. It would be amazing if you could take that video down. The prosecution and defense will, at the Order of the Judge, be mailing you a hearing request on this if you and I can't agree to the video coming down. Would you be agreeable to just take it down?
We have another video that WAS an exhibit that can be used in its place. I can let you know which exhibit that was.

Exh. 1 and Exh. 6, the bodycam videos of officer Greene and Officer McDowell were SEALED during the trial and then inadvertenly released to you due to the fact that the court reporter didn't mark them as sealed. Thanks again for the tour today!

Please see our location agreement attached below. Once signed we can countersign and send you a copy.

Also, we're planning to film in either the family court room or Amanda's office and arrive at 8a.

thanks!

Michael, so good to be talking with you this morning. I look forward to the events We have scheduled. I'm very excited for your journey and the books that you have written.

Hi Becky,

Thank you for taking the time to talk with me today! As discussed, attached is a copy of our standard appearance and location release for your review and signature. If you have any questions or concerns, please don't hesitate to let me know. It looks like we are a go to film at the courthouse on May 10, 2023. We would like to interview Joe McCulloch there as well, but that might shift slightly due to the amount of time our team would like to utilize filming all the interior locations you mentioned.

We talked about how you were able to see a lot of events during the trial that were not shown in the filming. If there is anything you can think of that we should definitely know before going out, please let me know. I was thinking about it after we got off the phone and you might have some great stories that would help us build interview questions to make sure we don't leave anything out.

Thank you again!
-Michelle

Dear Honorable Justice Beatty,

I come to you writing for support and explanation to my county finance and administration for the feeding and funding of 40 people in our courthouse for the Murdaugh Trial.

I received this email from our finance manager. At every turn, I have experienced questions on why I am doing things as a clerk of court. It's very petty, in my opinion that I have to be questioned for things regarding trial expenses for which I have a budget for.

Yes, this apparently has been termed "the trial of the century." It is being watched worldwide on television, YouTube, internet, podcasts, etc.

We in Colleton County certainly did not ask for any of this, but here we are trying our best to do what is necessary and accommodate the small circle that is involved in the courtroom.

We have a limited amount of time when Judge Newman says break and we are adjourned for an hour and 15 minutes. I am responsible for feeding 18 jurors, 2 bailiffs who watch over the jury, Judge Newman, his wife, his law clerk, his law enforcement detail, my 3 staff in the courtroom, me, my 2 court reporters, a media attorney who is here requested by the judge, 4 law enforcement who are security in the courtroom, the defendant and his 2 guards, court administration staff who is here, and an I.T. specialist who has been contracted in for the trial.

This kind of trial and it's process is large and quite frankly a new experience for us on this scale.

I am doing the best I know how in taking care in spending the tax payer dollars in the use of my budget to the best of my knowledge. If someone else would like to come in and take over, they are welcome to. I will hand over the accounts, the whole trial, the decision making process that comes with it, the complaints from the public, the media, my own County whom I feel pretty unsupported by, many of my staff, and I will gladly sit back and take a back seat, while someone with a much brighter mind takes the reigns. We have been planning for this whole trial process for 4 months. I was even tasked with searching for a hotel in the event the attorneys and judge would sequester the jury. I went to each hotel in my county and talked with the management, looked at rooms, saw each room with my own eyes, smelled for cleanliness , and talked about pricing in case of sequestration. It came down to one hotel, the Microtel Inn, and their management even was willing to block the entire 67 rooms all of December and much of January, until we found out 3 days before trial that there would be no sequestration. The Manager of Microtel was extremely disappointed of course, even though we talked all along about the process and the possibility of a sequestration not happening. However, we felt strongly all along that it would happen. Alas, it did not.

The Microtel has submitted a request to me of an amount to be paid to them for losing out on 6 weeks of rooms that could have been rented, that I need to submit to my county finance dept and administration, it is an amount for one night's rent of all the rooms, which I feel is only right. But we can address that later.

Currently, I'm disappointed that I have to deal with an explanation of 40 lunches for my courtroom personnel.

And one more thing, if I may, Judge Newman granted a motion yesterday and filed an Order granting the evidence of other crimes of the defendant to be introduced into this trial. So that means, our trial here will be extended to a further date. I'm going to be ordering lunches for quite a while longer.

I'm reaching out for support and help in this current situation I find myself in.

Please advise.

Your loyal and ever-learning Clerk in Colleton County,

Can you let me know why we are now getting 40 meals. My limited understanding is that we need to feed those who are not allowed to leave the courthouse like the jurors, the alternates, the defendant, the judge, but I can not come back to 40.

Thanks,
Jon

Charlotte!!! I cannot wait to meet you and photograph you!

Would Friday afternoon work for you? Sometime after 4?

If it is ok, I am going to send you some "paperwork" digitally and if you could fill that out for me so I can get a feel for the scope of work and what you need done for your shoot...

Thank you so much ! Feel free to email, text or call me with any questions you may have. My personal # is 706.373.3222

Exh. 1 and Exh. 6, the bodycam videos of officer Greene and Officer McDowell were SEALED during the trial and then inadvertenly released to you due to the fact that the court reporter didn't mark them as sealed. I believe we spoke about this when I learned that this had happened and you agreed on your word that you would not use them. Do you remember this? Did we email about this as well?

Hi Alex!

I hope you are doing well! It's already May 2023!

I went in and deleted the photos of Murdaugh Crime Scene out of my Dropbox to make room. Saved them to a thumb drive at the office. Now, however, I am at a SC Clerk of Court's Conference and find that I need to access them for a talk they want me to give! Would you be able to send me the Dropbox link again? I am forever indebted to you!!

Subject: Question regarding potential ethical issues related to authorship of a book

Becky,

You have inquired whether ethics legislation restricting activities of public officials would preclude your receiving compensation for a book of which you are the author. Restrictions on actions by public officials that might provide an official an economic benefit are contained in Chapter 13 of Title 8 of the South Carolina Code of Laws. The thrust of the restrictions is to prevent a public official from receiving a financial benefit for actions taken in the official's "official capacity." "Official capacity is defined in Section 8-13-30 to mean activities which:

(a) arise because of the position held by the public official…;

(b) involve matters which fall within the official responsibility of the…public official…; and

(c) are services the agency would normally provide and for which the public official…would be subject to expense reimbursement by the agency with which the public official…is associated.

Subsections (a), (b), and (c) are to be read together because of the conjunction "and" used at the transition point to subsection (c). The writing of a book, even one based on your experience as Clerk of Court during the Murdaugh trial, does not come within the definition of "official capacity" because the writing of a book is neither within your official responsibility as Clerk of Court, nor a service that your office would normally provide.

There is a restriction on compensation for speeches given by public officials under Section 8-13-715 acting in the official's "official capacity." There is no similar restriction on writing a book.

I have concluded that based on the definition of "official capacity" that since your office would not normally provide authorship of a book within its normal services, and since you are not subject to expense reimbursement for writing the book, you are not subject to any restrictions imposed by law for receiving compensation relating to the sales of copies of a book you write.

Should you have any questions or concerns, please to not hesitate to contact me.

Best regards.

Jay

What I need is for you and Billy to go thru and put in yalls names and then I need who will be the PR if you die and same when Billy dies should yall go together. I need the full names of all the children, grand Hildreth and great grand hildren that you want listed. Then for specific items you want left to specific people, you need to write that out. We can always add things . Let's focus on getting the document drawn up in the basic form. I also need addresses of all the adult children as well.

Hi Jason,

Priple are closing up and not talking. What in the world. I've tried to reach out to 5 people and the doors close in my face. The line I've heard out is Bexky, I love you, but I just can't talk about them.

I hope your journey has been better.

Val, thanks for the fun event Monday, God knows we need it. I have also expressed to Becky Hill our need to thank her and her staff for all their kindnesses. I have planned (with her) a thank you party/press mixer to honor her and her staff Wednesday evening and will provide drinks(within reason because I know journalists) and will have a food truck at the ready. Becky's very talented singer/ songwriter daughter will perform with congregation and music beginning around 7:30- when you all ought to be switching off your lights and retiring pencils. Y'all. It sounds so strange to say, but it has been a joy to share this bunker with you. Here's hoping we can all get together for a toast and some fellowship next week.

Monday is my birthday, and (the inimitable and awesome) Becky Hill has a birthday a few days after that. So, please join us at my place on Monday for CAKE (thanks, Becky!), beer, pizza and whatever else we can scrounge up between now and then.

Who: Press corps, lawyers and friends of the court. Please reach out to those I missed inadvertently! Just lmk so we can order enough for all.

What: CAKE, beer and pizza (and almost certainly Ruffles and French Onion dip and something else French because Arthur is coming)

Where: 580 Avant Road, Walterboro

When: Monday, whenever you're off deadline

How: my Air BNB is at the end of a mile-long dirt road. It's raining cats and dogs this minute, sooo...

a) if you have an SUV or truck, have at it or hop in with someone who does.
b) drive as far as the gate, park and walk if you feel like it and the sun's still out.
c) park at the gate and call me at 404.433.2293 and someone will come fetch you. If you don't believe me, ask Drew. Apparently he was back here drinking beer in high school!

With thanks,
Val

No, I hadn't seen it yet! Thank you for sharing it!
Aubrey and band had a great time singing in Beaufort. She said it was the biggest venue yet she has sang in. There were over 1,000 people. It opened the door for more opportunities to sing. She was approached by other beaufort officials to sing at upcoming events leading up to bfort water festival!

Thank you, Jamie. You're right -- 6 weeks of a trial as complex and tangled as Alex Murdaugh fitting into a 3-hour production is almost impossible, but I can't wait to see what y'all will do with it. It was such a pleasure meeting you and talking to you -- a survivor who is thriving -- I love it! Did you get an interview with a person we will be surprised to see?!

Also, my book has been submitted to publisher; it's in the editor's hands at the moment. Looking at a release date of July 31st!

Kind regards, xoxo

My understanding was that the County was responsible to pay half of the invoice amount billed. The Clerk of Courts office provided us three invoices, 6389164 (ck 37155), 6395011 (ck 37296) and 6434571 (ck 37524) and I have attached cancelled checks for these invoices.

If there is an additional invoice or a misunderstanding on how we were to handle it, please let me know.

Thanks,

Jon

David. I received the last invoice and I have forwarded that to our Finance Department for payment. You will see here on this email that on March 6th our accounts payable clerk requested that the proof of worker's comp insurance that you sent have some changes made to it. They requested that the Certificate Holder be changed to Colleton County, 109 Benson Street, Walterboro, SC 29488. I know that the trial is done and over but I believe they just need this for their records. I forwarded it to you at that time and have not heard back. The County has not asked me again for it but since you have sent your final bill I believe they will ask me again. Please look into this and see if you can get that to me ASAP. I appreciate it and Happy Friday to you as well!

Hi Alex!

I hope you are doing well! It's already May 2023!

I went in and deleted the photos of Murdaugh Crime Scene out of my Dropbox to make room. Saved them to a thumb drive at the office. Now, however, I am at a SC Clerk of Court's Conference and find that I need to access them for a talk they want me to give! Would you be able to send me the Dropbox link again? I am forever indebted to you!!

I have 3 jurors -- the ones that flew to NYC for the Today Show -- who may be willing to talk to you. Here is their information:

James McDowell 843-909-0897
Amie Williams 843-597-1614
Gwenolyn Jackson Generette 843-560-8980

These 3 would be good to reach out to. I will message them and tell them they will be contacted if you would like.

You are so welcome!

I noticed that you have a business name "Mad Hatter" -- so is that the name you have most of your writing and business under for authorship? My husband and i are in the planning stages as we speak with another couple - the husband is my ghost writer and we have created a business name and have a EIN number, operating agreement, a bank account, etc. Our accountant is guiding us along the way, as well as our attorney. Did you go through this in the early stage as well?

Hi Alex!

I hope you are doing well! It's already May 2023!

I went in and deleted the photos of Murdaugh Crime Scene out of my Dropbox to make room. Saved them to a thumb drive at the office. Now, however, I am at a SC Clerk of Court's Conference and find that I need to access them for a talk they want me to give! Would you be able to send me the Dropbox link again? To: rhill@colletoncounty.org <rhill@colletoncounty.org>

Becky,

You have inquired whether ethics legislation restricting activities of public officials would preclude your receiving compensation for a book of which you are the author. Restrictions on actions by public officials that might provide an official an economic benefit are contained in Chapter 13 of Title 8 of the South Carolina Code of Laws. The thrust of the restrictions is to prevent a public official from receiving a financial benefit for actions taken in the official's "official capacity." "Official capacity is defined in Section 8-13-30 to mean activities which:

(a) arise because of the position held by the public official…;

(b) involve matters which fall within the official responsibility of the…public official…; and

(c) are services the agency would normally provide and for which the public official…would be subject to expense reimbursement by the agency with which the public official…is associated.

Subsections (a), (b), and (c) are to be read together because of the conjunction "and" used at the transition point to subsection (c). The writing of a book, even one based on your experience as Clerk of Court during the Murdaugh trial, does not come within the definition of "official capacity" because the writing of a book is neither within your official responsibility as Clerk of Court, nor a service that your office would normally provide.

There is a restriction on compensation for speeches given by public officials under Section 8-13-715 acting in the official's "official capacity." There is no similar restriction on writing a book.

I have concluded that based on the definition of "official capacity" that since your office would not normally provide authorship of a book within its normal services, and since you are not subject to expense reimbursement for writing the book, you are not subject to any restrictions imposed by law for receiving compensation relating to the sales of copies of a book you write.

Should you have any questions or concerns, please to not hesitate to contact me.

Best regards.

Jay

Good morning, Courtney, my name is Rebecca hill and I am the clerk of court in college and county.Good morning, Courtney, my name is Rebecca hill and I am the clerk of court in college and county. I have a question about the writing of a book by a clerk of court about the process of trial from beginning to end, Focusing on the process itself the history of it and of course the High profile cases that South Carolina has had. What would be the ethic procedures behind this?

Hi Becky,

Thank you for taking the time to talk with me today! As discussed, attached is a copy of our standard appearance and location release for your review and signature. If you have any questions or concerns, please don't hesitate to let me know. It looks like we are a go to film at the courthouse on May 10, 2023. We would like to interview Joe McCulloch there as well, but that might shift slightly due to the amount of time our team would like to utilize filming all the interior locations you mentioned.

We talked about how you were able to see a lot of events during the trial that were not shown in the filming. If there is anything you can think of that we should definitely know before going out, please let me know. I was thinking about it after we got off the phone and you might have some great stories that would help us build interview questions to make sure we don't leave anything out.

Thank you again!

Hi Becky,

I'm scared it might be a bit complicated to make sushi, I know how to do it with certain specific products and I would not want to disappoint ! But just in case :
- raw salmon
- raw tuna
- rice for sushi
- rice vinegar
- mirin
- wasabi
- nori seaweed
- sake
- cucumber
- avocado
- soy sauce
- kumbu (it is another seaweed, not necessary though)
- a bamboo sushi rolling mat

Otherwise, I have other recipes in my pocket and don't mind going to Walmart to buy the ingredients !

See you later,

Arthur

I will be staying at the Baymont by Wyndham Inn and Suites for the first week, I'm not sure yet for the following days, but of course, any recommendations will be more than welcome, I will check on the court website.

I think I filled in my form stating I would need to be there from the 23rd until the 8th of February, do you think I should resend my form with the new dates ?

I can stay longer than what I mentioned, that is not a problem. Besides I would like to describe life in Hampton County after the trial and how things will get back to normal, so I will probably postpone my flight.

Do you think we could meet on the 19th of the 20th ?

Best wishes,

Arthur

I would definitely be eager to discuss the case with you, and indeed I may have a few questions about my stay in Walterboro - to be very honest, this is the first time I'm covering such a trial in the U.S. so your advice would be extremely precious. Would you have a bit of time in the coming weeks to talk about it on the phone or on zoom, whatever is more convenient for you ?

Before I print, fill and sign the form properly, I quickly filled it on Google doc, could you please tell me if I need to put extra informations - just want to be sure I'm not writing any mistake ? The photo camera is not essential, if this is a problem, I could simply use my laptop and a notepad.

Thank you very much for your help, and looking forward to hearing from you.

I took French in high school and college, but rarely use it anymore; I don't want to appear deceitful because my use of this language that I love is so very limited.

So good to hear from you. I've attached the form that you will just need to fill out and email back to me. The courtroom holds 234 people, and the trial attendance will be on a first come, first serve basis.

If you plan to stay in Walterboro, I can recommend some places to stay.

I think your book idea is great. Now is the time. I am also interested in writing a book. I have lived among the Murdaughs and worked with them and am kind of the "feet on the ground" so to speak. If you're interested in a partnership, let me know!

Jay,

Thank you so much. I just have some concerns about this agreement. They are "willing" to allow me to make amendments to this agreement, but bc it's a Netflix agreement, I can't submit my "own" release agreement." If you don't mind (and I'm going to owe you some really nice oysters! LOL) I am going to start an email thread to Mike Gasparro and include you in on it.

Give my love to Anne!

Hi Becky,

Thanks again for the tour today!

Please see our location agreement attached below. Once signed we can countersign and send you a copy.

Also, we're planning to film in either the family court room or Amanda's office and arrive at 8a.

A whiskey conspiracy: How 'Righteous Randolph' Murdaugh almost became 'Bootlegging Buster'

Second of two parts

Defense lawyers spewed venom at those who had dared to cross the cozy law enforcement establishment of the 14th Judicial Circuit when solicitor Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr. was accused in a case of widespread public corruption.
Prosecution witnesses were called "a bunch of stool pigeons, self-confessed liars, convicts and bootleggers" in closing arguments of the two-week "Colleton Whiskey Conspiracy" trial of 1956 that ensnared some 30 officials, bootleggers and businessmen.
Defense counsel James P. Harrelson of Walterboro, who also was a member of the state House of Representatives as well as a Baptist preacher, called star prosecution witness Edith Freeman "Mrs. 'Pious Sanctified' Freeman." But in reality, he said, she was a "cost accountant" for a whiskey still run by her husband. His large still near Walterboro was raided by federal agents in 1951 at the outset of the case, and her record-keeping in a little blue notebook of his payoffs to local law enforcement was crucial evidence in the trial.
"This is really 'old grudge week' and these bootleggers finally got a chance to get even with these fine Colleton County people who have been giving them so much trouble," Harrelson said, according to coverage by the News and Courier in Charleston.
Another lawyer called prosecution witnesses "putrid and contemptible."
Defense counsel Claud N. Sapp Jr. of Columbia called the government's witnesses "a bunch of self-confessed perjurers, thieves and convicts, who have taken the stand here to get even with decent people who were only trying to do their duty."
Attorney Richard A. Palmer, representing Murdaugh, said, "The (federal Alcohol Tobacco Tax Division) agents have never said a word against Mr. Murdaugh. It is these thieves, liars and convicts you will have to believe if you are going to convict him."
MurdaughWhiskyIllioLEDE02.jpgNews clippings from The News and Courier from the 1956 Buster Murdaugh whiskey conspiracy case. Dates of articles, from left: Oct. 3, 1956, Oct. 4, 1956 and Oct. 11, 1956.
Another attorney representing Murdaugh, W. Brantley Harvey Sr. of Beaufort, then a former state senator and a relative of Murdaugh, told the court:
"Each government witness who tried to belittle Mr. Murdaugh had a very personal or political reason for doing so. There has not been one stigma placed against him by anyone of good character."
However, witnesses for the government who testified that Murdaugh's "truth and veracity" could not be trusted included former sheriffs of Hampton and Colleton counties, as well as the sheriff of Richland County, who was a former ATTD agent.
And the other key witness against Murdaugh was a retired U.S. Marine Corps master sergeant, a highly-trusted rank for the principal non-commissioned officer at the battalion level, and sometimes higher.
Murdaugh's lead attorney, Henry H. "Hap" Edens Sr. of Columbia, tackled the conspiracy charge as one that can hinge on hearsay.
He held out the prospect of the government using it to indict innocent people en masse.
"Suppose you go home and ask your wife how she feels," Edens told the jurors. "Under this law you could be indicted for conspiracy with her."
Edens said Murdaugh came out clean after six years of "being spied on, tracked and plotted against by people who wanted to get him."
'RIGHTEOUS RANDOLPH'
Prosecutors had a quick response to the character issue.
"I'd rather have a self-admitted, penitent bootlegger, thief or perjurer testify than to see this bunch of hypocritical liars, thieves and perjurers come into this court and hide behind a battery of talented lawyers," assistant Attorney General Irvine F. Belser Jr. said.
"You can't prove a bar-room brawl by having testimony from a Methodist bishop or a Baptist preacher. They wouldn't be in the bar in the first place. You have to fight fire with fire. You have to set a thief to catch a thief.
"The fact that you have bootleggers testifying in this case is because they are the only people who could have any real inside knowledge of the situation."
History would repeat itself in the same Charleston courthouse 30 years later during the "Operation Jackpot" trials. The U.S. Attorney's Office got scores of convictions in that $400 million marijuana-smuggling ring in the Lowcountry by using insiders as witnesses.
Meet the Lowcountry's gentlemen smugglers - a mini-trailerWatch an abbreviated trailer produced by Charleston's Black Bear Studios of kingpins Barry "Flash" Foy and Les Riley as they are introduced for "The Gentlemen Smugglers" a documentary based on the Operation Jackpot drug-smuggling story.
Then-assistant U.S. Attorney Bart Daniel responded to the same defense by saying he was sorry but no nuns were in the smuggling business.
Prosecutors didn't mind blasting Buster Murdaugh's character.
Belser told jurors: "This man Murdaugh used to be called 'Righteous Randolph' but now it's 'Bootlegging Buster.'
"If you want a solicitor who takes bribes, counsels bootleggers and takes part in deceiving the grand jury; if you want a sheriff and deputies who participate with him; and if you want bootleggers running rampant in your community, then bring in an acquittal.
"You should know, however, that a conspiracy of this sort is a vicious thing. It is a web, sending its tentacles out into the entire community. It starts with one or two; then three and four and five and ultimately drags in many people. A verdict of guilty will be a verdict against that sort of thing in your community."
U.S. Attorney N. Welch Morrisette Jr. called the conspiracy "a sordid, sorry, sinful mess. Jesse James rode a horse but this man Murdaugh rides a Cadillac with a low license number."
MurdaughMorrissetteWelch.US Atty.jpgA photo of chief prosecutor, U.S. District Atty. N. Welch Morrisette Jr. of Columbia that published with his obituary.
Assistant U.S. Attorney Arthur G. Howe said, "This man Murdaugh could have stopped all this in 1951 -- right after the still raid -- if he had carried out his sworn duty. He was duty-bound to report such things to the grand jury.

"Instead, he first tried to hush up Mrs. Freeman. Then he tried to get her little notebook away and then he refused to defend her husband in federal court because he was afraid the facts might come out."

MURDAUGH THANKS GOD

Verdicts came in at 9:45 p.m. on a Monday after two six-day weeks of trial.

Buster Murdaugh and two minor players in the scheme were the only ones of 30 original defendants to be found not guilty.

In a hushed and tense courtroom, Jack Leland of the News and Courier reported, "Murdaugh ... breathed heavily, drew his hand rapidly across his mouth and appeared about to break down when the judge intoned 'not guilty' after his name.

"Mrs. (Gladys) Murdaugh was in the first-floor lobby, downstairs from the courtroom, when an unidentified man raced down the stairs to tell her the news.

"She broke down and wept."

Murdaugh thanked God "that the jury brought in a true verdict, insofar as I am concerned.

"I appreciate from the bottom of my heart and will be ever grateful for the loyalty displayed by my many friends who have openly stood by me and my family during this ordeal."

GladysMarvinMurdaugh_HamptonHS.jpgA photo of Gladys Marvin Murdaugh, wife of Randolph 'Buster' Murdaugh, that was compiled by the Hampton County Historical Society in a book entitled "From The Salkehatchie to the Savannah - A Visual Journey Through Hampton County."

Seventeen defendants were convicted by the jury, five entered guilty pleas after the trial started, four had charges dropped by the judge, and one had not been apprehended.

Among those to be found guilty were the former Colleton County sheriff, two former deputies and a former magistrate judge.

The next morning, U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman sentenced the sheriff to seven years in prison and a $3,000 fine.

One former deputy was sentenced to four years. Another deputy and the magistrate judge were each sentenced to three years in prison.

The judge also sent an order to the local federal judge and district attorney suggesting "appropriate action" be taken against two uncharged prosecution witnesses -- a special deputy and a magistrate -- who testified to illegal acts while they were law enforcement officials, the News and Courier reported.

When a state senator pleaded for probation for a former deputy who had pleaded guilty, the judge insisted he must pay his penalty in a penitentiary.

"If you brought the president of the United States and his worthy opponent in here I would not do otherwise," Hoffman said.

MURDAUGH 'GROSSLY UNETHICAL'

Hoffman expressed disgust with what he saw in Buster Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit.

"I don't think you can stop whiskey making in Colleton County or in any county, but I don't think you'll have such a wholesale operation any time soon," Hoffman said during the sentencing hearing.

"This is a bad situation. The people in Colleton County began saying 'to hell with the law' and didn't worry about the law at all. You people still have a lot of work to do to get the law back to its proper place in your county."

Hoffman saved his harshest words for Murdaugh, who wasn't there because he had been acquitted by the jury.

"I cannot get involved in Colleton County politics but I notice by the newspapers that Mr. Murdaugh plans to go back into office as solicitor.

"He is an acquitted man and that's his prerogative and his business. However, his completely unethical conduct was so grossly unethical by his own admission in this court that I couldn't go back and face my people if I were he. "But that's his business and it's also the business of the people there."

Hoffman.Walter.E.jpgThe photo of U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman that ran with his obituary.

Murdaugh's response through the media was combative, even suggesting he would sue the judge if his comments had not been privileged by being made in an open court.

As reported in an Associated Press story, Murdaugh was quick to invoke politics, and the Deep South's favorite bogeyman: "states' rights."

"When the federal government sends a Republican judge into this state to tell South Carolinians how to handle their politics, it's a perfect example of the further encroachment by the government on the rights of the states."

Judge Hoffman's main beef against Murdaugh was that he represented a bootlegger in federal court without prosecuting that crime at his own state level.

The judge said it was unethical.

Murdaugh said it "is a standing practice in this state. Further, it is specifically authorized by the South Carolina state laws ... a practice that has gone on for years."

MurdaughWhisky_MurdaughResponse.jpgNews clipping from Charleston's S.C.'s The News and Courier that appeared on Oct. 4, 1956.

'HIGHLY QUESTIONABLE TACTICS'

Hoffman's public statements were not the only complaints made against Murdaugh.

A week after the trial, Buster Murdaugh's first cousin, Alex G. Murdaugh of Orangeburg, was indicted on charges of attempting to influence a juror in his cousin's case.

The story about it shared the top of a News and Courier Sunday front page along with Don Larson's perfect game in the World Series.

The federal grand jury stated that a week before the trial, cousin Alex called the man who was subsequently named foreman of the jury that acquitted Buster Murdaugh and asked to meet him at a restaurant in Florence.

The indictment said he told the juror that Buster Murdaugh had been indicted "solely for political reasons."

A year later, a jury quickly found him not guilty. The jury foreman confirmed the facts of the indictment in court, but testified that it did not influence him.

MurdaughWhiskyCousinPC.jpgNews clipping from Charleston's S.C. The News and Courier on Oct. 9, 1956 when Buster Murdaugh's first cousin, Alex G. Murdaugh of Orangeburg, was indicted on charges of attempting to influence a juror in his cousin's case.

The jury foreman showed up in another blast at the Murdaugh acquittal. It came from the U.S. Department of Justice in Washington.

In a "United States Attorneys Bulletin" newsletter published by DOJ's Offices of United States Attorneys on Nov. 9, 1956, an ugly picture was painted of justice in Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit.

The document, reported last year by the FITSnews.com website in South Carolina, says:

"Before the trial, the court, over the strenuous objection of the government, granted the defendants' motion for disclosure of the names of the government witnesses.

"This was followed by very questionable practices on the part of some of the defendants and their attorneys during which government witnesses were threatened, attempts were made to influence them by promises of reward for themselves or members of their families, and at least one attempt was made to intimidate or influence the United States Attorney."

It said, "The defense resorted to some highly questionable tactics, all apparently designed to bring about an acquittal or mistrial as to Solicitor Murdaugh even at the risk of sacrificing the remaining defendants."

And it said, "Oddly enough, too, the foreman of the jury, immediately before the case was to go to the jury for deliberation, having received a telephone call informing him that his father was dying, declined to accept the court's proffer of release although an alternate juror was still present and available to take the foreman's place.

"It has been admitted by the foreman that he attended school with a brother of the defendant Murdaugh and in fact had dinner with him shortly before the trial began."

And it noted that "the judge also felt it necessary publicly to call attention to the fact that it is a separate and distinct offense for anyone to threaten a person who has testified in a court proceeding."

MurdaughRandolphBuster_HamptonHS.jpgA photograph of Randolph 'Buster' Murdaugh, far right, that appeared in a historical document entitled "From The Salkehatchie to the Savannah - A Visual Journey Through Hampton County" compiled by the Hampton County Historical Society.

'REJOICE IN HIS VINDICATION'

But in the South Carolina Lowcountry, Murdaugh found quick support from his hometown Hampton County grand jury.

Within two weeks of Murdaugh's acquittal, the grand jury wrote to the state court:

"We commend Randolph Murdaugh for the splendid manner in which he has handled the affairs of the office of solicitor," the News and Courier reported.

MurdaughWhisky_HamptonPraiseClip.jpgOct. 10, 1956 news clipping when the Hampton County grand jury commended Randolph 'Buster' Murdaugh in his handling of the office of the solicitor and 'rejoice in his vindication.'

"We deplore the outrageous charges brought against him and rejoice in his vindication. We sincerely hope he will return to the office of solicitor in the very near future and will continue to serve that office as long as he desires."

Murdaugh did just that.

He ran unopposed on the November ballot and resumed his position in January 1957, taking over for Beaufort attorney G.G. Dowling, who had been appointed to fill the post after Murdaugh resigned a week prior to his trial.

Murdaugh held the position for 46 years. He left it in 1986, when his son, Randolph Murdaugh III, took over and held it until 2006.

Randolph Murdaugh III's son, Alex Murdaugh, who was a prominent Lowcountry lawyer, faces 79 charges for alleged schemes to steal some $8.4 million from clients.

Alex Murdaugh was a volunteer with the 14th Circuit Solicitor's Office on the fateful night in 2019 that his boat, allegedly driven by his drunken son, Paul, crashed into a bridge at Parris Island, killing 19-year-old Mallory Beach.

Alex Murdaugh and his father dashed to the hospital where witnesses were being treated.

They knew what to do.

First of two parts

Minutes after his girlfriend was hurled to her death in a swirling Lowcountry creek, Anthony Cook spewed expletives about the young Murdaugh man he alleges was driving the boat.

"He ain't gettin' in no f---ing trouble," the Hampton County teen blurted toward a Beaufort County Sheriff's Office deputy in those chaotic wee hours three years ago.

Six young people were in the boat owned by Murdaugh's father, Richard Alexander "Alex" Murdaugh of Hampton County, then a powerful attorney who also volunteered in the 14th Judicial Circuit Solicitor's Office that his father, grandfather and great-grandfather ran for 86 years.

After the crash, the Murdaughs went to work immediately with a tried-and-true formula of brute power over the norms of authority.
Alex Murdaugh and his father, Randolph Murdaugh III, who has since died, were buzzing through the emergency room at Beaufort Memorial Hospital trying to manipulate a story line among crash victims.
In sworn testimony, Connor Cook, a boat passenger along with his cousin Anthony, would later say Alex Murdaugh told him that night to "keep my mouth shut and tell them I didn't know who was driving and that he's got me."
Dashcam video: Survivor of Paul Murdaugh boat crash consoled in Mallory Beach's deathAnthony Cook, boyfriend to Mallory Beach, was one of six onboard a boat driven by Paul Murdaugh on Feb. 24, 2019. (Note: inaudible sound)
That was only the beginning.
Today, Alex Murdaugh's wife and the son who was on the boat were murdered, and Alex Murdaugh is in jail under $7 million bond, accused of 71 counts of stealing a total of $8.9 million from clients, associates and his law firm, as well as three other charges in an alleged botched murder-for-hire scheme.
It has turned the eyes of the nation to the low bottom of South Carolina. They wonder how our so-called justice system got this way.
Here's how.
Fair warning came 66 years ago.
The family's power could have ended when solicitor Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr. -- Alex's grandfather -- was indicted with 29 others in a federal case of widespread public corruption.
But by hook or crook, Buster Murdaugh didn't "get in no f---ing trouble."
COLLETON WHISKEY CONSPIRACY
Buster Murdaugh was a living legend in the poor southern reaches of South Carolina's Lowcountry.
He died in 1998 as an honored man whose portrait hangs in the Hampton County Courthouse along with his son's, Randolph Murdaugh III.
Buster Murdaugh was a stocky, outgoing man, the alpha dog in every courtroom in the circuit -- and that included the judges.
Murdaugh_RandolphBusterJrDM.jpegA photograph of a portrait of Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr., Solicitor for the 14th Circuit 1940-87 that is displayed in the General Sessions Courtroom A in Hampton, S.C.
He was known for courtroom theatrics, a mouth constantly full of chewing tobacco, and unquestioned control of all criminal cases as chief state prosecutor in Hampton, Colleton, Allendale, Jasper and Beaufort counties from 1940 to 1986.
With his pockets filled with indictments, he controlled what went to trial and what didn't, as well as when and why.
But in June 1956, the tables were suddenly turned on Buster Murdaugh. He was indicted by a federal grand jury in the bombshell "Colleton Whiskey Conspiracy."
Law enforcement in Buster Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit was revealed to be a criminal enterprise.
The grand jury's initial indictment list of 26 people included the Colleton County sheriff, three of his deputies, two former deputies and a magistrate judge, along with a host of bootleggers and businessmen. A second magistrate testified he was involved, but was not charged.
When Murdaugh was added to the indictment list later, he was accused of being part of a conspiracy that directed and personally profited from the flow of illicit whiskey on a grand scale in return for payoffs.
Testimony poured out in great detail, as The News and Courier newspaper in Charleston reported, showing defendants taking bribes, manipulating fines and staging friendly raids to falsely make it look like law enforcement was doing something about the rampant crime.
Also clinging to the case were accusations of tampering with jurors and witnesses, even the U.S. district attorney. The two key prosecution witnesses had to be protected by federal marshals during the trial.
Testimony showed that none of the corruption happened in a vacuum. Many hands were in the till. Disregard for the law was blatant. And the dirty laundry was aired for all to see.
JACKASS POND TO THE COURTHOUSE
The distillery that drew the U.S. Treasury Department's Alcohol Tobacco Tax Division into what became a five-year investigation was operating in an open field three miles outside of Walterboro, the Colleton County seat.
It was so large people referred to it as "Schenley's" -- the name of one of the world's largest legal liquor producers at the time.
Prosecutors said the conspiracy thrived with 32 moonshine stills that produced 90,000 gallons of illicit liquor over its investigation period.
Charleston was plodding through an exceptionally warm September when the fast-paced, two-week trial enthralled the Lowcountry -- even as another "trial of the century" was taking place in Beaufort for the Marine drill instructor who led his recruits into Ribbon Creek on Parris Island, killing six.
Assistant U.S. Attorney Arthur G. Howe of Charleston called the Colleton whiskey scandal "the most important case ever tried in South Carolina.
"It reaches to the crux of our government and our way of life. It reaches from the swamps of Jackass Pond into the Colleton County Courthouse."
And, many would say, it reaches into 2022.
BUSTER MURDAUGH NOT GUILTY
Buster Murdaugh walked away from Charleston's famed "four corners of the law" a free man, even though prosecutors said he was the brains of the entire operation.
The jury acquitted only Murdaugh and two minor players in the conspiracy: a plantation property manager, and a man from the Green Pond area who could find underground water supplies for bootleggers by using a dogwood branch.
But visiting federal district judge Walter E. Hoffman of Virginia saw enough to call Murdaugh "grossly unethical."
And a week after the verdict, a first cousin of Buster Murdaugh -- a man named Alex G. Murdaugh of Orangeburg -- was indicted on charges of attempting to influence a juror in the trial, according to news stories. He was found not guilty the next year, but testimony established that he met with the juror -- who ended up being the jury foreman -- and told him his cousin was charged only for political reasons.
MurdaughWhiskyAcquittedPC.jpgThe front page of The News and Courier on Oct. 2, 1956 when 14th Circuit Solicitor Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr. was acquitted of the whiskey conspiracy case
A number of other irregularities were reported by the Department of Justice after the trial.
Taken as a whole, the gavel-to-gavel coverage in The News and Courier (Now Post and Courier) by legendary Charleston journalist Jack Leland shows how a community can find itself in a cesspool.
There was a feeling of impunity, that any legal trouble could be fixed.
Leland's stories show jury manipulation, threats against witnesses, greed among the accused, state laws and legal practices that encouraged corruption, and a local grand jury kowtowing to Buster Murdaugh.
It was said in court that the Hampton County Bar Association had tried unsuccessfully to get Buster Murdaugh disbarred six years earlier for allegedly stealing from clients.
Murdaugh's single indictment charged that he conspired with a man to move an illegal whiskey still from Hampton County to Colleton County to avoid interference by local officers.
Murdaugh was found not guilty, but testimony showed him to be up to his neck in the conspiracy, even taking a cash payout in a courthouse hallway.
Bootleggers, who had to get permission from law enforcement to go into business, paid authorities in cash and/or cases of moonshine liquor bottled in clear fruit jars.
The prosecution leaned heavily on the testimony of a deputy who turned state's evidence.
And a little blue notebook.
'DON'T SHOOT NO MORE'
The scandal literally exploded shortly at 4 a.m. on Nov. 15, 1951.
A federal investigator just getting into the case raided an old barn near Walterboro. He discovered a hefty 1,500-gallon metal distillery, about 1,100 gallons of untaxed liquor and some 12,000 gallons of mash.
Reporter Jack Leland described the action as it unfolded like a grainy black-and-white movie.
The federal agent entered the dark barn, leaped over a man who was asleep on a pile of charcoal, then grabbed a second man as a third one burst through the tar-paper side of the barn and ran to a house about three-quarters of a mile away.
WalterboroWaterTowerDM.jpgThe City of Walterboro's water tower.
"I ran to the back door and this man Dock Freeman jammed a pistol into my stomach and told me to stop real still," the agent testified. "I told him who I was and started to reach for my badge in my pocket."
Freeman said: "If you put your hand in your pocket I'll blow your f---ing heart out."
The agent dashed to his car to get a shotgun.
"I saw a man appear at the window with what looked like a shotgun," he testified. "I fired at him. Soon he appeared at another window and I fired again."
Freeman, wounded in the stomach and head, staggered onto the porch, calling out: "Don't shoot no more, you've got me."
Suddenly, he turned and ran back through the house. The agent heard a car start. When it came racing around the house, he shot out both left tires.
After sending Freeman to the Colleton County Hospital, the agents dynamited the still.
What happened that night would blow up again and again in the face of the conspirators.
'WE FELL OUT OFTEN'
Buster Murdaugh rushed to the scene.
Prosecutors said it was because he was worried bootlegger Dock B. Freeman, who had moved to these parts from Georgia, would talk to the feds. But the Jasper County sheriff testified it was typical for the solicitor to report to the scenes of unusual shootings, no matter the hour.
Edith Thigpen Freeman, Dock's wife, had left her husband, who was living on the swampy side of the law. He'd already been arrested eight times for making moonshine. And by the time the Colleton conspiracy trial rolled around five years later, Dock Freeman was locked up in the federal penitentiary in Atlanta.
"I have never helped Dock make whiskey," Edith testified, "but I never reported him to an officer.
"We fell out often. It was so hard on the two children, him living like that. But that's all he knows. He can't read or write. My first child was five weeks old when I first knew he was in that sort of trouble."
Edith Freeman returned to Colleton County after the shootout, and would end up swatting down a thick cobweb of corruption in the Lowcountry.
She knew that her husband paid hundreds of dollars regularly to law enforcement so that he could produce illicit whiskey without interference.
And after his still was dynamited, Dock Freeman kept up his schedule of paying the deputy who was the "collector" for the sheriff.
But it turned out the sheriff had not expected the payola while the still was down, and it was discovered the deputy was not giving other parties in law enforcement their share.
That's when Edith Freeman started penciling in their payoffs in a little blue spiral notebook, evidence that would turn the case.
And she discovered something else that pointed to a sick level of Lowcountry corruption: $13,000 in cash was missing from an old Navy pea-coat that was in the house when the raid took place.
She would never see that money again -- or maybe she did.

MEETING MR. MURDAUGH

Edith Freeman kept cash savings pinned inside her dress.

According to testimony reported by the News and Courier, she had entrusted $13,000 to her husband when she left him. She testified $5,000 belonged to her and the rest was moonshine income.

When Dock was in the hospital after the shooting, he told the sheriff about the money.

Edith Freeman testified that two deputies told her they went to the house to retrieve the money and persuaded the federal agents to let them search the place. A deputy later told the sheriff he couldn't find the money, she said.

She assumed the federal agents found the money, and asked the sheriff to help her get it back. He said he would ask solicitor Murdaugh to help her.

"I had never seen Mr. Murdaugh before," Edith Freeman testified. "He came to see me and we sat in a car and talked."

A history of the Murdaugh family's powerful influence on SCFor more than a century, the Murdaugh name has stood for power and justice in South Carolina. How much influence have they historically had?

She was put out with the sheriff because she felt her husband was paying for protection that he didn't get. She said she wanted charges brought against the federal agent who shot Dock. And she told Murdaugh about the missing money.

When her husband's hospital bill came due, she asked the deputy they dealt with for some money to pay it.

"He let us have $500. When we got it, Dock and I were looking it over and I suddenly realized it was folded just like the money I used to keep pinned in my dress. We told (the deputy) about it and he said he'd gotten it from the bank and wanted to take it back to the bank. We kept it.

"Later, Mr. Murdaugh also asked if we would give it to him. He said he would have the FBI trace it but we still kept the money."

She testified that later, when the deputy and Murdaugh knew about her little notebook listing payoffs, the deputy asked her to give the notebook to him or burn it, and that Murdaugh asked her to give it to him. She refused, and later gave it to federal agents.

'BUNCH OF BUZZARDS'

When Dock Freeman got out of the hospital, they needed $5,000 for his legal defense.

She got $2,000 from the deputy and sold her car and other property for the rest, she testified.

The News and Courier reported that on cross-examination by Murdaugh's lead defense attorney, Henry H. "Hap" Edens Sr. of Columbia, Edith Freeman admitted that she "was 'very much hurt' when Murdaugh treated her brusquely at his office in Hampton and later refused to see her at all.

This occurred, she said, when she went to Hampton in an effort to retrieve a bill of sale for her automobile that she had given to Murdaugh.

In closing arguments, Assistant U.S. Attorney Arthur G. Howe of Charleston said, "She went up there to get back the only car she had left after that bunch of buzzards, vultures and so-called law enforcement officers had taken her to the cleaners."

He also told jurors: "This case wouldn't have broken, perhaps, except that these law enforcement officers and payoff takers got too greedy.

"They couldn't be satisfied with getting part of the payoffs. It was then that this illiterate bootlegger, Dock B. Freeman, got suspicious and decided he'd better keep a record of his payments so they couldn't shake him down twice. That little notebook resulted and started it all."

Edith Freeman testified she could never prove who took their $13,000 cash, but she suspected the local officials.

The judge overruled U.S. District Attorney N. Welch Morrisette Jr.'s request that the jury hear testimony that Edith Freeman had been approached a week before the trial in Augusta, Georgia, where she lived, by a lawyer who said he could fix up her husband's probation through a "friendly politician" if she would testify for the defense.

Edith Freeman was not the only person afraid she'd be double-crossed by the Colleton conspirators.

'I'LL HELP YOU'

Riddick Herndon was a 44-year-old retired U.S. Marine Corps master sergeant when he fingered Buster Murdaugh as a key figure in widespread public corruption of the 14th Judicial Circuit.

He was described by the Charleston newspaper covering the "Colleton Whiskey Conspiracy" trial as a "slightly bald, wiry and hawk-nosed former deputy sheriff."

As a volunteer Colleton County deputy he witnessed and participated in the bootlegging conspiracy.

After serving in the Corps for 20 years, Herndon came home to Walterboro with a $145 monthly pension.

He was repeatedly hammered by defense attorneys who said he cooperated with the government strictly because he would lose his pension if convicted of conspiracy.

Visiting federal district Judge Walter E. Hoffman of Virginia warned Herndon before he testified that any promise of immunity from prosecution he might have been offered wasn't "worth the paper it was written on."

But Herndon said, "I will testify regardless of what happens and without regard to any promise of immunity."

He said that after retirement he became a fishing and hunting buddy of the Colleton County sheriff, while living as a bachelor with his parents, who worked at the county jail.

He testified that in 1952, the sheriff asked him to go on a still raid. After the raid, the sheriff told him he could have two cases of seized whiskey for his "share." The sheriff allegedly sold the whiskey and gave him $36 for it.

"I had never had any connection with illegal whiskey before that and I was very much surprised that such a thing was going on," he testified.

From there, he would become an unpaid special deputy, and the sheriff's "collector."

Monthly collections ranged from $15 to $100, either in cash or whiskey, from distillers and retailers. Total collections were about $500 a month (equivalent to more than $5,000 today). He said he kept 20% and turned the rest over to the sheriff.

Herndon testified that in early 1955, rumors were rampant that a federal grand jury was about to return indictments against a group of Colleton County officials and citizens.

He said he heard that the sheriff and a magistrate had gone to see Murdaugh in Hampton, and he was afraid the sheriff was "getting ready to double cross me."

So he went to Murdaugh and confessed to "the whole system and all about the payoffs. I told him that the sheriff had promised me that as long as I stayed in the whiskey setup he would help me and would pay any fines I might get."

He testified that Murdaugh responded: "For God's sake keep quiet about this. If you need money or get in trouble, come to me. I'll help you."

'PEELED OFF TWO $100 BILLS'

The moonshine industry brought another stream of income to corrupt Lowcountry officials, according to trial testimony: payoffs after arrests.

Herndon testified he witnessed the Colleton County sheriff share payoff money with Murdaugh in a courthouse hallway.

The money came from an arrested bootlegger. The deputy said he had been instructed by the sheriff to tell the bootlegger it would cost $500 to get him a light sentence.

The deputy said he received the money in the judge's chambers while court was in session.

"I walked out of the judge's chambers into the hall," the deputy testified. "(The sheriff) came by and I gave him $400. I had been told to keep $100 for myself.

"About that time, Mr. Murdaugh came up and (the sheriff) peeled off two $100 bills and gave them to him and remarked, 'I wish I could get one like that every day.'

"The following day, (the sheriff) told me that Murdaugh had raised hell about him paying the money in my presence."

MurdaughWhisky_WitnessPayoff.jpgA news clipping from the News and Courier published on Sept. 22, 1956 that reported a former Colleton County deputy sheriff witnessed a $500 pay-off split between Randolph Murdaugh and a former sheriff.

A different bootlegger testified he approached the sheriff after two of his still workers had been arrested and faced trial in state court.

"I told him I was afraid one of the boys would tell all he knowed if he got a stiff sentence. He told me if I could get $200 -- that was $100 for him and $100 for Mr. Murdaugh -- that he (the sheriff) would see what he could do to get ... a light probation."

Another bootlegger testified the sheriff told him he could get a case "squashed" for $550.

But a circuit judge took the stand to refute allegations that Murdaugh worked out light fines or sentences for bootleggers who were paying officials. He testified that all his sentences and fines during the court session in question were typical.

'I'LL TAKE CARE OF THEM'

Officials of the 14th Judicial Circuit found yet another way to flaunt the law.

At one point, according to testimony, the head of the Colleton County grand jury started leaning on the sheriff and Murdaugh to do something about the illicit booze industry.

They responded with "friendly raids" to dupe the public and the grand jury.

The deputy who turned state's evidence testified that the friendly raids were Murdaugh's idea.

He testified that Murdaugh told him "to go back to the sheriff and tell him to get out and make some raids if only 'friendly raids' even if he (Murdaugh) and (the sheriff) had to pay the fines."

He quoted Murdaugh as saying: "For God's sake make the raids even if you have to warn them in advance, catch them and set up fines. I'll take care of them."

A Colleton County bootlegger testified that the sheriff arranged a "friendly raid" on his still, and a pint of whiskey was seized. He said he and the sheriff then drank about half of the pint and the sheriff took the rest away as "evidence."

In another incident, a still that was partially owned by the deputy who turned state's evidence was raided. A photographer was taken along and photos were released to the media.

"The News and Courier ran a picture of me on May 28, 1954, showing me wrecking my own still," he told the court.

In another instance, students were taken from the Cottageville High School vocational agriculture class to observe a friendly raid in action.

MURDAUGH ON THE STAND

Murdaugh took the stand on a fiery 10th day of the two-week trial.

He "denied flatly ever being associated in a whiskey conspiracy," the News and Courier of Charleston reported under the front-page headline: "Battle Of Wits Marks Murdaugh Court Appearance."

Reporter Jack Leland described a "tense verbal skirmish" between Murdaugh and assistant district attorney Irvine Furman C. Belser Jr. of Columbia. It was so ill-tempered the judge told them he'd get them boxing gloves to work it out the next week.

Judge Hoffman joined the rage when Belser mentioned Murdaugh's "income tax matters."

Defense attorney Henry H. Edens Sr. objected, and Judge Hoffman tore into Belser:

"You know that is inadmissible as evidence. I'll fine you for contempt of court if you continue. I'm not going to let a man be convicted in this court because of innuendo. ... These civil cases must not be used to infer anything. You can either follow my orders, or you can get out of this courtroom."

However, the prosecution gained admission from a Murdaugh character witness that the solicitor had previous troubles, although the testimony took place after the jury was excused.

"Have you heard about the Hampton County Bar Association efforts to disbar Murdaugh for lying and stealing from clients?" U.S. District Attorney Morrisette asked a prominent Estill grain elevator owner.

"I didn't know what the grounds were," he replied. "I did hear, about six years ago, that the county bar association tried to bring charges against Mr. Murdaugh but they never succeeded."

Earlier, the foreman of the Colleton County grand jury testified that the former sheriff's deputy who was a key government witness told him in the courthouse that he'd been lying throughout the trial.

After consultation in the judge's chambers, that was stricken from the record.

Murdaugh denied being involved with light sentences for bootleggers, and a state judge testified that Murdaugh made no requests in the matter.

Murdaugh was questioned about two payments he made to the sheriff.

He said a check for $1,950 was repayment for "investigations carried out for me in a civil case."

He said a check for $998.32 was to repay the sheriff for money he spent to take care of the families of men injured in accidents, which he said was the custom in his area.

MurdaughWhisky_MurdaughWits.jpgNews clippings from Charleston's S.C.'s The News and Courier that appeared on Sept. 28, 1956

Murdaugh attacked the testimony of Edith Freeman, a star prosecution witness whose husband was a convicted bootlegger.

He said she was enraged because she wanted a case brought against a federal agent who shot her husband in a confrontation after his still near Walterboro was raided.

Murdaugh said he told her to swear out a warrant against the agent, which she did.

He said he refused to prosecute the case because it involved a hassle between Colleton County officers and federal officers.

Murdaugh also addressed the $13,000 cash missing from the Freeman house following the raid.

He said he contacted federal officials in Columbia about it.

The News and Courier reported he "was told the Freemans were 'about the biggest bootleggers ever to come out of Georgia.' He said also that they denied any federal agent took the money and 'claimed the county officers got it.' "

Murdaugh was also asked why he would not bring state charges against an accused Hampton County bootlegger, although he represented him as a private attorney on those charges in federal court, earning his law firm $1,733.

Murdaugh responded that the man had never been indicted by a local grand jury.

That man was the bootlegger who testified that Murdaugh once advised him to move his whiskey still to Colleton County where he could operate freely -- the charge in Murdaugh's indictment.

He had been "identified as a long-time fishing and hunting friend of Murdaugh's until recent political differences," the newspaper said.

Murdaugh's secretary testified she had always known the man as a bootlegger.

Asked what he knew the man as, Murdaugh said, "A farmer."

That is the issue, and if you would agree not to use the body cam footage videos, that would be most helpful.

Becky,

You have inquired whether ethics legislation restricting activities of public officials would preclude your receiving compensation for a book of which you are the author. Restrictions on actions by public officials that might provide an official an economic benefit are contained in Chapter 13 of Title 8 of the South Carolina Code of Laws. The thrust of the restrictions is to prevent a public official from receiving a financial benefit for actions taken in the official's "official capacity." "Official capacity is defined in Section 8-13-30 to mean activities which:

(a) arise because of the position held by the public official…;

(b) involve matters which fall within the official responsibility of the…public official…; and

(c) are services the agency would normally provide and for which the public official…would be subject to expense reimbursement by the agency with which the public official…is associated.

Subsections (a), (b), and (c) are to be read together because of the conjunction "and" used at the transition point to subsection (c). The writing of a book, even one based on your experience as Clerk of Court during the Murdaugh trial, does not come within the definition of "official capacity" because the writing of a book is neither within your official responsibility as Clerk of Court, nor a service that your office would normally provide.

There is a restriction on compensation for speeches given by public officials under Section 8-13-715 acting in the official's "official capacity." There is no similar restriction on writing a book.

I have concluded that based on the definition of "official capacity" that since your office would not normally provide authorship of a book within its normal services, and since you are not subject to expense reimbursement for writing the book, you are not subject to any restrictions imposed by law for receiving compensation relating to the sales of copies of a book you write.

Should you have any questions or concerns, please to not hesitate to contact me.

Best regards.

Jay

Mike, how long would you want /need to be in the building? Here is the reason I ask. I don't mind your use at all, but we have to have 2 security here and the county asks that whoever needs the courthouse for any reason pay for security. The pay is $35 an hour and is to be paid by the organization using courthouse. Let me know your needs and what we can work out. If you have any questions, please let me know.

Ms. Williams,

Please find attached an order confirming the sealing of the Greene and McDowell body cam footage. The portions of the video displaying the victims was considered and treated as sealed during trial by the parties and this is to ensure they remain so.

Anthony, hi! I'm still out of town in a conf. I am getting a staff of mine to start scanning.

I've spoken with Mike also and he is willing to finish up scanning when he gets to town.

Apparently the Dropbox photos got deleted. ?

Soooo we are regrouping and scanning again.

Hang with me,

Hi Lois!

Hope you are having a good Friday. I am working on deadline this weekend to get my book, Behind the Doors of Justice, to the publisher. Next week will be a few free days if you want to try to schedule supper date! We are free the nights of Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.
Let me know if y'all's schedules would be open to any of those.

Take care!

23 And these three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, fell down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

24 Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonished, and rose up in haste, and spake, and said unto his counsellors, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king.

25 He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

26 Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the mouth of the burning fiery furnace, and spake, and said, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, ye servants of the most high God, come forth, and come hither. Then Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, came forth of the midst of the fire.

Hi Becky!

It was SO amazing to talk to you today! Thank you so much for your time and wisdom.

I am talking with my ghost writer, who is helping me, about us publishing the book ourselves through Amazon. His wife is an established photographer who wants to design the book cover and believe that will be the way we will go. Our thoughts are to photograph me standing up on the second story of the courthouse where the stairs come up to the doors. The lights will be on inside and she has lighting that will help with that as the doors will be open and go with the title "Behind the Doors of Justice -- the Murdaugh Murders' Trial. Then I would like to have a "ghost photo" of the elder Murdaugh Men's faces down below, and a pic of Alec's face, Maggie to the left, Paul to the right and Bubba laying down below (maybe with a chicken in his mouth?) What do you think?

I've included the link above to the Dropbox photos of Murdaugh. Please let me know if you have any trouble accessing them.

Gonna keep this email short so I can press SEND and get these over to you!

xoxo

Hey Michelle,

Would you mind reaching out to my Chief at the Sheriff's Office, Gean Johnson, to verify the need for me to have a deputy here at the courthouse on Wednesday and that your company will be paying them? His number is 843-898-1365. Our Sheriff's Office has a contract made up for payingif you need to use it.

A whiskey conspiracy: How 'Righteous Randolph' Murdaugh almost became 'Bootlegging Buster'

Second of two parts

Defense lawyers spewed venom at those who had dared to cross the cozy law enforcement establishment of the 14th Judicial Circuit when solicitor Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr. was accused in a case of widespread public corruption.

Prosecution witnesses were called "a bunch of stool pigeons, self-confessed liars, convicts and bootleggers" in closing arguments of the two-week "Colleton Whiskey Conspiracy" trial of 1956 that ensnared some 30 officials, bootleggers and businessmen.

Defense counsel James P. Harrelson of Walterboro, who also was a member of the state House of Representatives as well as a Baptist preacher, called star prosecution witness Edith Freeman "Mrs. 'Pious Sanctified' Freeman." But in reality, he said, she was a "cost accountant" for a whiskey still run by her husband. His large still near Walterboro was raided by federal agents in 1951 at the outset of the case, and her record-keeping in a little blue notebook of his payoffs to local law enforcement was crucial evidence in the trial.

"This is really 'old grudge week' and these bootleggers finally got a chance to get even with these fine Colleton County people who have been giving them so much trouble," Harrelson said, according to coverage by the News and Courier in Charleston.

Another lawyer called prosecution witnesses "putrid and contemptible."

Defense counsel Claud N. Sapp Jr. of Columbia called the government's witnesses "a bunch of self-confessed perjurers, thieves and convicts, who have taken the stand here to get even with decent people who were only trying to do their duty."

Attorney Richard A. Palmer, representing Murdaugh, said, "The (federal Alcohol Tobacco Tax Division) agents have never said a word against Mr. Murdaugh. It is these thieves, liars and convicts you will have to believe if you are going to convict him."

MurdaughWhiskyIllioLEDE02.jpgNews clippings from The News and Courier from the 1956 Buster Murdaugh whiskey conspiracy case. Dates of articles, from left: Oct. 3, 1956, Oct. 4, 1956 and Oct. 11, 1956.

Another attorney representing Murdaugh, W. Brantley Harvey Sr. of Beaufort, then a former state senator and a relative of Murdaugh, told the court:

"Each government witness who tried to belittle Mr. Murdaugh had a very personal or political reason for doing so. There has not been one stigma placed against him by anyone of good character."

However, witnesses for the government who testified that Murdaugh's "truth and veracity" could not be trusted included former sheriffs of Hampton and Colleton counties, as well as the sheriff of Richland County, who was a former ATTD agent.

And the other key witness against Murdaugh was a retired U.S. Marine Corps master sergeant, a highly-trusted rank for the principal non-commissioned officer at the battalion level, and sometimes higher.

Murdaugh's lead attorney, Henry H. "Hap" Edens Sr. of Columbia, tackled the conspiracy charge as one that can hinge on hearsay.

He held out the prospect of the government using it to indict innocent people en masse.

"Suppose you go home and ask your wife how she feels," Edens told the jurors. "Under this law you could be indicted for conspiracy with her."

Edens said Murdaugh came out clean after six years of "being spied on, tracked and plotted against by people who wanted to get him."

'RIGHTEOUS RANDOLPH'

Prosecutors had a quick response to the character issue.

"I'd rather have a self-admitted, penitent bootlegger, thief or perjurer testify than to see this bunch of hypocritical liars, thieves and perjurers come into this court and hide behind a battery of talented lawyers," assistant Attorney General Irvine F. Belser Jr. said.

"You can't prove a bar-room brawl by having testimony from a Methodist bishop or a Baptist preacher. They wouldn't be in the bar in the first place. You have to fight fire with fire. You have to set a thief to catch a thief.

"The fact that you have bootleggers testifying in this case is because they are the only people who could have any real inside knowledge of the situation."

History would repeat itself in the same Charleston courthouse 30 years later during the "Operation Jackpot" trials. The U.S. Attorney's Office got scores of convictions in that $400 million marijuana-smuggling ring in the Lowcountry by using insiders as witnesses.

Meet the Lowcountry's gentlemen smugglers - a mini-trailerWatch an abbreviated trailer produced by Charleston's Black Bear Studios of kingpins Barry "Flash" Foy and Les Riley as they are introduced for "The Gentlemen Smugglers" a documentary based on the Operation Jackpot drug-smuggling story.

Then-assistant U.S. Attorney Bart Daniel responded to the same defense by saying he was sorry but no nuns were in the smuggling business.

Prosecutors didn't mind blasting Buster Murdaugh's character.

Belser told jurors: "This man Murdaugh used to be called 'Righteous Randolph' but now it's 'Bootlegging Buster.'

"If you want a solicitor who takes bribes, counsels bootleggers and takes part in deceiving the grand jury; if you want a sheriff and deputies who participate with him; and if you want bootleggers running rampant in your community, then bring in an acquittal.

"You should know, however, that a conspiracy of this sort is a vicious thing. It is a web, sending its tentacles out into the entire community. It starts with one or two; then three and four and five and ultimately drags in many people. A verdict of guilty will be a verdict against that sort of thing in your community."

MurdaughMorrissetteWelch.US Atty.jpgA photo of chief prosecutor, U.S. District Atty. N. Welch Morrisette Jr. of Columbia that published with his obituary.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Arthur G. Howe said, "This man Murdaugh could have stopped all this in 1951 -- right after the still raid -- if he had carried out his sworn duty. He was duty-bound to report such things to the grand jury. "Instead, he first tried to hush up Mrs. Freeman. Then he tried to get her little notebook away and then he refused to defend her husband in federal court because he was afraid the facts might come out."

MURDAUGH THANKS GOD

Verdicts came in at 9:45 p.m. on a Monday after two six-day weeks of trial.

Buster Murdaugh and two minor players in the scheme were the only ones of 30 original defendants to be found not guilty.

In a hushed and tense courtroom, Jack Leland of the News and Courier reported, "Murdaugh ... breathed heavily, drew his hand rapidly across his mouth and appeared about to break down when the judge intoned 'not guilty' after his name.

"Mrs. (Gladys) Murdaugh was in the first-floor lobby, downstairs from the courtroom, when an unidentified man raced down the stairs to tell her the news.
"She broke down and wept."
Murdaugh thanked God "that the jury brought in a true verdict, insofar as I am concerned.
"I appreciate from the bottom of my heart and will be ever grateful for the loyalty displayed by my many friends who have openly stood by me and my family during this ordeal."
GladysMarvinMurdaugh_HamptonHS.jpgA photo of Gladys Marvin Murdaugh, wife of Randolph 'Buster' Murdaugh, that was compiled by the Hampton County Historical Society in a book entitled "From The Salkehatchie to the Savannah - A Visual Journey Through Hampton County."
Seventeen defendants were convicted by the jury, five entered guilty pleas after the trial started, four had charges dropped by the judge, and one had not been apprehended.
Among those to be found guilty were the former Colleton County sheriff, two former deputies and a former magistrate judge.
The next morning, U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman sentenced the sheriff to seven years in prison and a $3,000 fine.
One former deputy was sentenced to four years. Another deputy and the magistrate judge were each sentenced to three years in prison.
The judge also sent an order to the local federal judge and district attorney suggesting "appropriate action" be taken against two uncharged prosecution witnesses -- a special deputy and a magistrate -- who testified to illegal acts while they were law enforcement officials, the News and Courier reported.
When a state senator pleaded for probation for a former deputy who had pleaded guilty, the judge insisted he must pay his penalty in a penitentiary.
"If you brought the president of the United States and his worthy opponent in here I would not do otherwise," Hoffman said.
MURDAUGH 'GROSSLY UNETHICAL'
Hoffman expressed disgust with what he saw in Buster Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit.
"I don't think you can stop whiskey making in Colleton County or in any county, but I don't think you'll have such a wholesale operation any time soon," Hoffman said during the sentencing hearing.
"This is a bad situation. The people in Colleton County began saying 'to hell with the law' and didn't worry about the law at all. You people still have a lot of work to do to get the law back to its proper place in your county."
Hoffman saved his harshest words for Murdaugh, who wasn't there because he had been acquitted by the jury.
"I cannot get involved in Colleton County politics but I notice by the newspapers that Mr. Murdaugh plans to go back into office as solicitor.
"He is an acquitted man and that's his prerogative and his business. However, his completely unethical conduct was so grossly unethical by his own admission in this court that I couldn't go back and face my people if I were he.
"But that's his business and it's also the business of the people there."
Hoffman.Walter.E.jpgThe photo of U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman that ran with his obituary.
Murdaugh's response through the media was combative, even suggesting he would sue the judge if his comments had not been privileged by being made in an open court.
As reported in an Associated Press story, Murdaugh was quick to invoke politics, and the Deep South's favorite bogeyman: "states' rights."
"When the federal government sends a Republican judge into this state to tell South Carolinians how to handle their politics, it's a perfect example of the further encroachment by the government on the rights of the states."
Judge Hoffman's main beef against Murdaugh was that he represented a bootlegger in federal court without prosecuting that crime at his own state level.
The judge said it was unethical.
Murdaugh said it "is a standing practice in this state. Further, it is specifically authorized by the South Carolina state laws ... a practice that has gone on for years."
MurdaughWhisky_MurdaughResponse.jpgNews clipping from Charleston's S.C.'s The News and Courier that appeared on Oct. 4, 1956.
'HIGHLY QUESTIONABLE TACTICS'
Hoffman's public statements were not the only complaints made against Murdaugh.
A week after the trial, Buster Murdaugh's first cousin, Alex G. Murdaugh of Orangeburg, was indicted on charges of attempting to influence a juror in his cousin's case.
The story about it shared the top of a News and Courier Sunday front page along with Don Larson's perfect game in the World Series.
The federal grand jury stated that a week before the trial, cousin Alex called the man who was subsequently named foreman of the jury that acquitted Buster Murdaugh and asked to meet him at a restaurant in Florence.
The indictment said he told the juror that Buster Murdaugh had been indicted "solely for political reasons."
A year later, a jury quickly found him not guilty. The jury foreman confirmed the facts of the indictment in court, but testified that it did not influence him.
MurdaughWhiskyCousinPC.jpgNews clipping from Charleston's S.C. The News and Courier on Oct. 9, 1956 when Buster Murdaugh's first cousin, Alex G. Murdaugh of Orangeburg, was indicted on charges of attempting to influence a juror in his cousin's case.
The jury foreman showed up in another blast at the Murdaugh acquittal. It came from the U.S. Department of Justice in Washington.
In a "United States Attorneys Bulletin" newsletter published by DOJ's Offices of United States Attorneys on Nov. 9, 1956, an ugly picture was painted of justice in Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit.
The document, reported last year by the FITSnews.com website in South Carolina, says:
"Before the trial, the court, over the strenuous objection of the government, granted the defendants' motion for disclosure of the names of the government witnesses.
"This was followed by very questionable practices on the part of some of the defendants and their attorneys during which government witnesses were threatened, attempts were made to influence them by promises of reward for themselves or members of their families, and at least one attempt was made to intimidate or influence the United States Attorney."
It said, "The defense resorted to some highly questionable tactics, all apparently designed to bring about an acquittal or mistrial as to Solicitor Murdaugh even at the risk of sacrificing the remaining defendants."
And it said, "Oddly enough, too, the foreman of the jury, immediately before the case was to go to the jury for deliberation, having received a telephone call informing him that his father was dying, declined to accept the court's proffer of release although an alternate juror was still present and available to take the foreman's place.
"It has been admitted by the foreman that he attended school with a brother of the defendant Murdaugh and in fact had dinner with him shortly before the trial began."
And it noted that "the judge also felt it necessary publicly to call attention to the fact that it is a separate and distinct offense for anyone to threaten a person who has testified in a court proceeding."
MurdaughRandolphBuster_HamptonHS.jpgA photograph of Randolph 'Buster' Murdaugh, far right, that appeared in a historical document entitled "From The Salkehatchie to the Savannah - A Visual Journey Through Hampton County" compiled by the Hampton County Historical Society.
'REJOICE IN HIS VINDICATION'
But in the South Carolina Lowcountry, Murdaugh found quick support from his hometown Hampton County grand jury.
Within two weeks of Murdaugh's acquittal, the grand jury wrote to the state court:
"We commend Randolph Murdaugh for the splendid manner in which he has handled the affairs of the office of solicitor," the News and Courier reported.
MurdaughWhisky_HamptonPraiseClip.jpgOct. 10, 1956 news clipping when the Hampton County grand jury commended Randolph 'Buster' Murdaugh in his handling of the office of the solicitor and 'rejoice in his vindication.'
"We deplore the outrageous charges brought against him and rejoice in his vindication. We sincerely hope he will return to the office of solicitor in the very near future and will continue to serve that office as long as he desires."
Murdaugh did just that.
He ran unopposed on the November ballot and resumed his position in January 1957, taking over for Beaufort attorney G.G. Dowling, who had been appointed to fill the post after Murdaugh resigned a week prior to his trial.
Murdaugh held the position for 46 years. He left it in 1986, when his son, Randolph Murdaugh III, took over and held it until 2006.
Randolph Murdaugh III's son, Alex Murdaugh, who was a prominent Lowcountry lawyer, faces 79 charges for alleged schemes to steal some $8.4 million from clients.
Alex Murdaugh was a volunteer with the 14th Circuit Solicitor's Office on the fateful night in 2019 that his boat, allegedly driven by his drunken son, Paul, crashed into a bridge at Parris Island, killing 19-year-old Mallory Beach.
Alex Murdaugh and his father dashed to the hospital where witnesses were being treated.
They knew what to do.

First of two parts

Minutes after his girlfriend was hurled to her death in a swirling Lowcountry creek, Anthony Cook spewed expletives about the young Murdaugh man he alleges was driving the boat.
"He ain't gettin' in no f---ing trouble," the Hampton County teen blurted toward a Beaufort County Sheriff's Office deputy in those chaotic wee hours three years ago.
Six young people were in the boat owned by Murdaugh's father, Richard Alexander "Alex" Murdaugh of Hampton County, then a powerful attorney who also volunteered in the 14th Judicial Circuit Solicitor's Office that his father, grandfather and great-grandfather ran for 86 years.
After the crash, the Murdaughs went to work immediately with a tried-and-true formula of brute power over the norms of authority.
Alex Murdaugh and his father, Randolph Murdaugh III, who has since died, were buzzing through the emergency room at Beaufort Memorial Hospital trying to manipulate a story line among crash victims.
In sworn testimony, Connor Cook, a boat passenger along with his cousin Anthony, would later say Alex Murdaugh told him that night to "keep my mouth shut and tell them I didn't know who was driving and that he's got me."
Dashcam video: Survivor of Paul Murdaugh boat crash consoled in Mallory Beach's deathAnthony Cook, boyfriend to Mallory Beach, was one of six onboard a boat driven by Paul Murdaugh on Feb. 24, 2019. (Note:

inaudible sound)
That was only the beginning.
Today, Alex Murdaugh's wife and the son who was on the boat were murdered, and Alex Murdaugh is in jail under $7 million bond, accused of 71 counts of stealing a total of $8.9 million from clients, associates and his law firm, as well as three other charges in an alleged botched murder-for-hire scheme.
It has turned the eyes of the nation to the low bottom of South Carolina. They wonder how our so-called justice system got this way.
Here's how.
Fair warning came 66 years ago.
The family's power could have ended when solicitor Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr. -- Alex's grandfather -- was indicted with 29 others in a federal case of widespread public corruption.
But by hook or crook, Buster Murdaugh didn't "get in no f---ing trouble."
COLLETON WHISKEY CONSPIRACY
Buster Murdaugh was a living legend in the poor southern reaches of South Carolina's Lowcountry.
He died in 1998 as an honored man whose portrait hangs in the Hampton County Courthouse along with his son's, Randolph Murdaugh III.
Buster Murdaugh was a stocky, outgoing man, the alpha dog in every courtroom in the circuit -- and that included the judges.
Murdaugh_RandolphBusterJrDM.jpegA photograph of a portrait of Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr., Solicitor for the 14th Circuit 1940-87 that is displayed in the General Sessions Courtroom A in Hampton, S.C.
He was known for courtroom theatrics, a mouth constantly full of chewing tobacco, and unquestioned control of all criminal cases as chief state prosecutor in Hampton, Colleton, Allendale, Jasper and Beaufort counties from 1940 to 1986.
With his pockets filled with indictments, he controlled what went to trial and what didn't, as well as when and why.
But in June 1956, the tables were suddenly turned on Buster Murdaugh. He was indicted by a federal grand jury in the bombshell "Colleton Whiskey Conspiracy."
Law enforcement in Buster Murdaugh's 14th Judicial Circuit was revealed to be a criminal enterprise.
The grand jury's initial indictment list of 26 people included the Colleton County sheriff, three of his deputies, two former deputies and a magistrate judge, along with a host of bootleggers and businessmen. A second magistrate testified he was involved, but was not charged.
When Murdaugh was added to the indictment list later, he was accused of being part of a conspiracy that directed and personally profited from the flow of illicit whiskey on a grand scale in return for payoffs.
Testimony poured out in great detail, as The News and Courier newspaper in Charleston reported, showing defendants taking bribes, manipulating fines and staging friendly raids to falsely make it look like law enforcement was doing something about the rampant crime.
Also clinging to the case were accusations of tampering with jurors and witnesses, even the U.S. district attorney. The two key prosecution witnesses had to be protected by federal marshals during the trial.
Testimony showed that none of the corruption happened in a vacuum. Many hands were in the till. Disregard for the law was blatant. And the dirty laundry was aired for all to see.
JACKASS POND TO THE COURTHOUSE
The distillery that drew the U.S. Treasury Department's Alcohol Tobacco Tax Division into what became a five-year investigation was operating in an open field three miles outside of Walterboro, the Colleton County seat.
It was so large people referred to it as "Schenley's" -- the name of one of the world's largest legal liquor producers at the time.
Prosecutors said the conspiracy thrived with 32 moonshine stills that produced 90,000 gallons of illicit liquor over its investigation period.
Charleston was plodding through an exceptionally warm September when the fast-paced, two-week trial enthralled the Lowcountry -- even as another "trial of the century" was taking place in Beaufort for the Marine drill instructor who led his recruits into Ribbon Creek on Parris Island, killing six.
Assistant U.S. Attorney Arthur G. Howe of Charleston called the Colleton whiskey scandal "the most important case ever tried in South Carolina.
"It reaches to the crux of our government and our way of life. It reaches from the swamps of Jackass Pond into the Colleton County Courthouse."
And, many would say, it reaches into 2022.
BUSTER MURDAUGH NOT GUILTY
Buster Murdaugh walked away from Charleston's famed "four corners of the law" a free man, even though prosecutors said he was the brains of the entire operation.
The jury acquitted only Murdaugh and two minor players in the conspiracy: a plantation property manager, and a man from the Green Pond area who could find underground water supplies for bootleggers by using a dogwood branch.
But visiting federal district judge Walter E. Hoffman of Virginia saw enough to call Murdaugh "grossly unethical."
And a week after the verdict, a first cousin of Buster Murdaugh -- a man named Alex G. Murdaugh of Orangeburg -- was indicted on charges of attempting to influence a juror in the trial, according to news stories. He was found not guilty the next year, but testimony established that he met with the juror -- who ended up being the jury foreman -- and told him his cousin was charged only for political reasons.
MurdaughWhiskyAcquittedPC.jpgThe front page of The News and Courier on Oct. 2, 1956 when 14th Circuit Solicitor Randolph "Buster" Murdaugh Jr. was acquitted of the whiskey conspiracy case
A number of other irregularities were reported by the Department of Justice after the trial.
Taken as a whole, the gavel-to-gavel coverage in The News and Courier (Now Post and Courier) by legendary Charleston journalist Jack Leland shows how a community can find itself in a cesspool.
There was a feeling of impunity, that any legal trouble could be fixed.
Leland's stories show jury manipulation, threats against witnesses, greed among the accused, state laws and legal practices that encouraged corruption, and a local grand jury kowtowing to Buster Murdaugh.
It was said in court that the Hampton County Bar Association had tried unsuccessfully to get Buster Murdaugh disbarred six years earlier for allegedly stealing from clients.
Murdaugh's single indictment charged that he conspired with a man to move an illegal whiskey still from Hampton County to Colleton County to avoid interference by local officers.
Murdaugh was found not guilty, but testimony showed him to be up to his neck in the conspiracy, even taking a cash payout in a courthouse hallway.
Bootleggers, who had to get permission from law enforcement to go into business, paid authorities in cash and/or cases of moonshine liquor bottled in clear fruit jars.
The prosecution leaned heavily on the testimony of a deputy who turned state's evidence.
And a little blue notebook.
'DON'T SHOOT NO MORE'
The scandal literally exploded shortly at 4 a.m. on Nov. 15, 1951.
A federal investigator just getting into the case raided an old barn near Walterboro. He discovered a hefty 1,500-gallon metal distillery, about 1,100 gallons of untaxed liquor and some 12,000 gallons of mash.
Reporter Jack Leland described the action as it unfolded like a grainy black-and-white movie.
The federal agent entered the dark barn, leaped over a man who was asleep on a pile of charcoal, then grabbed a second man as a third one burst through the tar-paper side of the barn and ran to a house about three-quarters of a mile away.
WalterboroWaterTowerDM.jpgThe City of Walterboro's water tower.
"I ran to the back door and this man Dock Freeman jammed a pistol into my stomach and told me to stop real still," the agent testified. "I told him who I was and started to reach for my badge in my pocket."
Freeman said: "If you put your hand in your pocket I'll blow your f---ing heart out."
The agent dashed to his car to get a shotgun.
"I saw a man appear at the window with what looked like a shotgun," he testified. "I fired at him. Soon he appeared at another window and I fired again."
Freeman, wounded in the stomach and head, staggered onto the porch, calling out: "Don't shoot no more, you've got me."
Suddenly, he turned and ran back through the house. The agent heard a car start. When it came racing around the house, he shot out both left tires.
After sending Freeman to the Colleton County Hospital, the agents dynamited the still.
What happened that night would blow up again and again in the face of the conspirators.
'WE FELL OUT OFTEN'
Buster Murdaugh rushed to the scene.
Prosecutors said it was because he was worried bootlegger Dock B. Freeman, who had moved to these parts from Georgia, would talk to the feds. But the Jasper County sheriff testified it was typical for the solicitor to report to the scenes of unusual shootings, no matter the hour.
Edith Thigpen Freeman, Dock's wife, had left her husband, who was living on the swampy side of the law. He'd already been arrested eight times for making moonshine. And by the time the Colleton conspiracy trial rolled around five years later, Dock Freeman was locked up in the federal penitentiary in Atlanta.
"I have never helped Dock make whiskey," Edith testified, "but I never reported him to an officer.
"We fell out often. It was so hard on the two children, him living like that. But that's all he knows. He can't read or write. My first child was five weeks old when I first knew he was in that sort of trouble."
Edith Freeman returned to Colleton County after the shootout, and would end up swatting down a thick cobweb of corruption in the Lowcountry.
She knew that her husband paid hundreds of dollars regularly to law enforcement so that he could produce illicit whiskey without interference.
And after his still was dynamited, Dock Freeman kept up his schedule of paying the deputy who was the "collector" for the sheriff.
But it turned out the sheriff had not expected the payola while the still was down, and it was discovered the deputy was not giving other parties in law enforcement their share.
That's when Edith Freeman started penciling in their payoffs in a little blue spiral notebook, evidence that would turn the case.
And she discovered something else that pointed to a sick level of Lowcountry corruption: $13,000 in cash was missing from an old Navy pea-coat that was in the house when the raid took place.
She would never see that money again -- or maybe she did.
MEETING MR. MURDAUGH
Edith Freeman kept cash savings pinned inside her dress.
According to testimony reported by the News and Courier, she had entrusted $13,000 to her husband when she left him. She testified $5,000 belonged to her and the rest was moonshine income.
When Dock was in the hospital after the shooting, he told the sheriff about the money.

Edith Freeman testified that two deputies told her they went to the house to retrieve the money and persuaded the federal agents to let them search the place. A deputy later told the sheriff he couldn't find the money, she said. She assumed the federal agents found the money, and asked the sheriff to help her get it back. He said he would ask solicitor Murdaugh to help her.

"I had never seen Mr. Murdaugh before," Edith Freeman testified. "He came to see me and we sat in a car and talked."

A history of the Murdaugh family's powerful influence on SCFor more than a century, the Murdaugh name has stood for power and justice in South Carolina. How much influence have they historically had?

She was put out with the sheriff because she felt her husband was paying for protection that he didn't get. She said she wanted charges brought against the federal agent who shot Dock. And she told Murdaugh about the missing money.

When her husband's hospital bill came due, she asked the deputy they dealt with for some money to pay it.

"He let us have $500. When we got it, Dock and I were looking it over and I suddenly realized it was folded just like the money I used to keep pinned in my dress. We told (the deputy) about it and he said he'd gotten it from the bank and wanted to take it back to the bank. We kept it.

"Later, Mr. Murdaugh also asked if we would give it to him. He said he would have the FBI trace it but we still kept the money."

She testified that later, when the deputy and Murdaugh knew about her little notebook listing payoffs, the deputy asked her to give the notebook to him or burn it, and that Murdaugh asked her to give it to him. She refused, and later gave it to federal agents.

'BUNCH OF BUZZARDS'

When Dock Freeman got out of the hospital, they needed $5,000 for his legal defense.

She got $2,000 from the deputy and sold her car and other property for the rest, she testified.

The News and Courier reported that on cross-examination by Murdaugh's lead defense attorney, Henry H. "Hap" Edens Sr. of Columbia, Edith Freeman admitted that she "was 'very much hurt' when Murdaugh treated her brusquely at his office in Hampton and later refused to see her at all.

This occurred, she said, when she went to Hampton in an effort to retrieve a bill of sale for her automobile that she had given to Murdaugh.

In closing arguments, Assistant U.S. Attorney Arthur G. Howe of Charleston said, "She went up there to get back the only car she had left after that bunch of buzzards, vultures and so-called law enforcement officers had taken her to the cleaners."

He also told jurors: "This case wouldn't have broken, perhaps, except that these law enforcement officers and payoff takers got too greedy.

"They couldn't be satisfied with getting part of the payoffs. It was then that this illiterate bootlegger, Dock B. Freeman, got suspicious and decided he'd better keep a record of his payments so they couldn't shake him down twice. That little notebook resulted and started it all."

Edith Freeman testified she could never prove who took their $13,000 cash, but she suspected the local officials.

The judge overruled U.S. District Attorney N. Welch Morrisette Jr.'s request that the jury hear testimony that Edith Freeman had been approached a week before the trial in Augusta, Georgia, where she lived, by a lawyer who said he could fix up her husband's probation through a "friendly politician" if she would testify for the defense.

Edith Freeman was not the only person afraid she'd be double-crossed by the Colleton conspirators.

'I'LL HELP YOU'

Riddick Herndon was a 44-year-old retired U.S. Marine Corps master sergeant when he fingered Buster Murdaugh as a key figure in widespread public corruption of the 14th Judicial Circuit.

He was described by the Charleston newspaper covering the "Colleton Whiskey Conspiracy" trial as a "slightly bald, wiry and hawk-nosed former deputy sheriff."

As a volunteer Colleton County deputy he witnessed and participated in the bootlegging conspiracy.

After serving in the Corps for 20 years, Herndon came home to Walterboro with a $145 monthly pension.

He was repeatedly hammered by defense attorneys who said he cooperated with the government strictly because he would lose his pension if convicted of conspiracy.

Visiting federal district Judge Walter E. Hoffman of Virginia warned Herndon before he testified that any promise of immunity from prosecution he might have been offered wasn't "worth the paper it was written on."

But Herndon said, "I will testify regardless of what happens and without regard to any promise of immunity."

He said that after retirement he became a fishing and hunting buddy of the Colleton County sheriff, while living as a bachelor with his parents, who worked at the county jail.

He testified that in 1952, the sheriff asked him to go on a still raid. After the raid, the sheriff told him he could have two cases of seized whiskey for his "share." The sheriff allegedly sold the whiskey and gave him $36 for it.

"I had never had any connection with illegal whiskey before that and I was very much surprised that such a thing was going on," he testified.

From there, he would become an unpaid special deputy, and the sheriff's "collector."

Monthly collections ranged from $15 to $100, either in cash or whiskey, from distillers and retailers. Total collections were about $500 a month (equivalent to more than $5,000 today). He said he kept 20% and turned the rest over to the sheriff.

Herndon testified that in early 1955, rumors were rampant that a federal grand jury was about to return indictments against a group of Colleton County officials and citizens.

He said he heard that the sheriff and a magistrate had gone to see Murdaugh in Hampton, and he was afraid the sheriff was "getting ready to double cross me."

So he went to Murdaugh and confessed to "the whole system and all about the payoffs. I told him that the sheriff had promised me that as long as I stayed in the whiskey setup he would help me and would pay any fines I might get."

He testified that Murdaugh responded: "For God's sake keep quiet about this. If you need money or get in trouble, come to me. I'll help you."

'PEELED OFF TWO $100 BILLS'

The moonshine industry brought another stream of income to corrupt Lowcountry officials, according to trial testimony: payoffs after arrests.

Herndon testified he witnessed the Colleton County sheriff share payoff money with Murdaugh in a courthouse hallway.

The money came from an arrested bootlegger. The deputy said he had been instructed by the sheriff to tell the bootlegger it would cost $500 to get him a light sentence.

The deputy said he received the money in the judge's chambers while court was in session.

"I walked out of the judge's chambers into the hall," the deputy testified. "(The sheriff) came by and I gave him $400. I had been told to keep $100 for myself.

"About that time, Mr. Murdaugh came up and (the sheriff) peeled off two $100 bills and gave them to him and remarked, 'I wish I could get one like that every day.'

"The following day, (the sheriff) told me that Murdaugh had raised hell about him paying the money in my presence."

MurdaughWhisky_WitnessPayoff.jpgA news clipping from the News and Courier published on Sept. 22, 1956 that reported a former Colleton County deputy sheriff witnessed a $500 pay-off split between Randolph Murdaugh and a former sheriff.

A different bootlegger testified he approached the sheriff after two of his still workers had been arrested and faced trial in state court.

"I told him I was afraid one of the boys would tell all he knowed if he got a stiff sentence. He told me if I could get $200 -- that was $100 for him and $100 for Mr. Murdaugh -- that he (the sheriff) would see what he could do to get ... a light probation."

Another bootlegger testified the sheriff told him he could get a case "squashed" for $550.

But a circuit judge took the stand to refute allegations that Murdaugh worked out light fines or sentences for bootleggers who were paying officials. He testified that all his sentences and fines during the court session in question were typical.

'I'LL TAKE CARE OF THEM'

Officials of the 14th Judicial Circuit found yet another way to flaunt the law.

At one point, according to testimony, the head of the Colleton County grand jury started leaning on the sheriff and Murdaugh to do something about the illicit booze industry.

They responded with "friendly raids" to dupe the public and the grand jury.

The deputy who turned state's evidence testified that the friendly raids were Murdaugh's idea.

He testified that Murdaugh told him "to go back to the sheriff and tell him to get out and make some raids if only 'friendly raids' even if he (Murdaugh) and (the sheriff) had to pay the fines."

He quoted Murdaugh as saying: "For God's sake make the raids even if you have to warn them in advance, catch them and set up fines. I'll take care of them."

A Colleton County bootlegger testified that the sheriff arranged a "friendly raid" on his still, and a pint of whiskey was seized. He said he and the sheriff then drank about half of the pint and the sheriff took the rest away as "evidence."

In another incident, a still that was partially owned by the deputy who turned state's evidence was raided. A photographer was taken along and photos were released to the media.

"The News and Courier ran a picture of me on May 28, 1954, showing me wrecking my own still," he told the court.

MURDAUGH ON THE STAND

Murdaugh took the stand on a fiery 10th day of the two-week trial.

He "denied flatly ever being associated in a whiskey conspiracy," the News and Courier of Charleston reported under the front-page headline: "Battle Of Wits Marks Murdaugh Court Appearance."

Reporter Jack Leland described a "tense verbal skirmish" between Murdaugh and assistant district attorney Irvine Furman C. Belser Jr. of Columbia. It was so ill-tempered the judge told them he'd get them boxing gloves to work it out the next week.

Judge Hoffman joined the rage when Belser mentioned Murdaugh's "income tax matters."

Defense attorney Henry H. Edens Sr. objected, and Judge Hoffman tore into Belser:

"You know that is inadmissible as evidence. I'll fine you for contempt of court if you continue. I'm not going to let a man be convicted in this court because of innuendo. ... These civil cases must not be used to infer anything. You can either follow my orders, or you can get out of this courtroom."

However, the prosecution gained admission from a Murdaugh character witness that the solicitor had previous troubles, although the testimony took place after the jury was excused.

"Have you heard about the Hampton County Bar Association efforts to disbar Murdaugh for lying and stealing from clients?" U.S. District Attorney Morrisette asked a prominent Estill grain elevator owner.

"I didn't know what the grounds were," he replied. "I did hear, about six years ago, that the county bar association tried to bring charges against Mr. Murdaugh but they never succeeded."

Earlier, the foreman of the Colleton County grand jury testified that the former sheriff's deputy who was a key government witness told him in the courthouse that he'd been lying throughout the trial.

After consultation in the judge's chambers, that was stricken from the record.

Murdaugh denied being involved with light sentences for bootleggers, and a state judge testified that Murdaugh made no requests in the matter.

Murdaugh was questioned about two payments he made to the sheriff.

He said a check for $1,950 was repayment for "investigations carried out for me in a civil case."

He said a check for $998.32 was to repay the sheriff for money he spent to take care of the families of men injured in accidents, which he said was the custom in his area.

MurdaughWhisky_MurdaughWits.jpgNews clippings from Charleston's S.C.'s The News and Courier that appeared on Sept. 28, 1956

Murdaugh attacked the testimony of Edith Freeman, a star prosecution witness whose husband was a convicted bootlegger.

He said she was enraged because she wanted a case brought against a federal agent who shot her husband in a confrontation after his still near Walterboro was raided.

Murdaugh said he told her to swear out a warrant against the agent, which she did.

He said he refused to prosecute the case because it involved a hassle between Colleton County officers and federal officers.

Murdaugh also addressed the $13,000 cash missing from the Freeman house following the raid.

He said he contacted federal officials in Columbia about it.

The News and Courier reported he "was told the Freemans were 'about the biggest bootleggers ever to come out of Georgia.' He said also that they denied any federal agent took the money and 'claimed the county officers got it.' "

Murdaugh was also asked why he would not bring state charges against an accused Hampton County bootlegger, although he represented him as a private attorney on those charges in federal court, earning his law firm $1,733.

Murdaugh responded that the man had never been indicted by a local grand jury.

That man was the bootlegger who testified that Murdaugh once advised him to move his whiskey still to Colleton County where he could operate freely -- the charge in Murdaugh's indictment.

He had been "identified as a long-time fishing and hunting friend of Murdaugh's until recent political differences," the newspaper said.

Murdaugh's secretary testified she had always known the man as a bootlegger.

Asked what he knew the man as, Murdaugh said, "A farmer."

Hey Rhon!

My flowers are still beautiful!!!
Why does life still seem to be so busy!? I'm ready for some slow down. Today may be a day to do that. My throat is hurting, sinuses are stopped up. We'e kept the grandboys last 3 nights and may be a little tired. LOL

HEre is a chapter from book.....

Mr. Mike Atwood,

Good afternoon.
My name is Shiori Sameshima and I work at TopSpin Creative Corporation, a Japanese television production company in New York City. Currently, we are working with Fuji Television Network, one of the major networks in Japan, in producing a documentary program entitled “Amazing Stories.”

PROGRAM;
Title: Amazing Stories (Unbelievable)
Media: standard TV by Fuji Television Network, geographically restricted streaming (free non-subscription platform)
Territory: Japan only
Term: Twice in 2 years for TV broadcast, with 1 week (occasionally 1 month) of streaming each time.
This primetime weekly documentary series has featured interesting stories from around the world to educate, amaze, and inspire Japanese audiences for more than 20 years. The program is composed of actual footage, interviews, and brief reenactment scenes, as well as positive discussions among Japanese panels in the studio following the stories. Typically, shows introduce two to three stories in one hour.

We will feature the "Murdaugh Murder” Mystery in the upcoming segment and we would like to obtain any available court documents including photos/videos etc.
Could you kindly advise us on how we can request or access to these documents/files?

Thank you for taking your time and let me know if you need any additional information required.
Since it’s a bit urgent, we hope to hear back from you very soon.

Thanks,
Shiori

Jay,

Thank you so much. I just have some concerns about this agreement. They are "willing" to allow me to make amendments to this agreement, but bc it's a Netflix agreement, I can't submit my "own" release agreement." If you don't mind (and I'm going to owe you some really nice oysters! LOL) I am going to start an email thread to Mike Gasparro and include you in on it.

Hi Becky,

I'm scared it might be a bit complicated to make sushi, I know how to do it with certain specific products and I would not want to disappoint ! But just in case :
- raw salmon
- raw tuna
- rice for sushi
- rice vinegar
- mirin
- wasabi
- nori seaweed
- sake
- cucumber
- avocado
- soy sauce
- kumbu (it is another seaweed, not necessary though)
- a bamboo sushi rolling mat

Otherwise, I have other recipes in my pocket and don't mind going to Walmart to buy the ingredients !

See you later,

I think I filled in my form stating I would need to be there from the 23rd until the 8th of February, do you think I should resend my form with the new dates ?

I can stay longer than what I mentioned, that is not a problem. Besides I would like to describe life in Hampton County after the trial and how things will get back to normal, so I will probably postpone my flight.

Do you think we could meet on the 19th of the 20th ?

Would you have a bit of time in the coming weeks to talk about it on the phone or on zoom, whatever is more convenient for you ?

Before I print, fill and sign the form properly, I quickly filled it on Google doc, could you please tell me if I need to put extra informations - just want to be sure I'm not writing any mistake ? The photo camera is not essential, if this is a problem, I could simply use my laptop and a notepad.

Hi Jack,

I love it. Great work. The only thing I would like to add is the website where people can go to pre-order www.behindthedoorsofjustice.com . And that the book is coming out August 1, 2023. My first book signing will be held at COLLETON COFFEE on Thursday, Aug. 3, at 6 pm.

Thank you!!

Ronda Rich!!

Oh my goodness, you are such an angel!! Your MIL was Mary Tyler Moore!!! She was a FAVORITE of mine !!! Really!!!

Well, I have your wonderful signed books!!! I received your flowers, but the card just said, Ronda! and I have 5 friends who are Rhondas!!!! They ALL claimed the flowers!! Haha!!

I HAVE WRITTEN A BOOK and I want to talk to you about reading it and possibly giving a review of it WHEN you have time!!. I understand fully when you're head is in a book that you're writing and you are on deadline!!

I just can't express how much I enjoyed meeting you, getting to know you, receiving your books, and now that I know, your flowers, and I have thoroughly enjoyed reading your books. Please let me know if you have a brief window of time that we could talk by telephone. I would love to talk to you!

Kindest regards and much love,

Becky

I can do Wednesday night dinner. Would love to!

I've attached the photo that photographer has designed for book cover. It needs tweaking. I think it needs a diff pic of me, but I am very critical of myself and my looks.

Give me some honest feedback!

Good morning, Courtney, my name is Rebecca hill and I am the clerk of court in college and county.Good morning, Courtney, my name is Rebecca hill and I am the clerk of court in college and county. I have a question about the writing of a book by a clerk of court about the process of trial from beginning to end, Focusing on the process itself the history of it and of course the High profile cases that South Carolina has had. What would be the ethic procedures behind this?

Hi Michele,

If you have someone that could come down to look through the unsealed exhibits that are allowed to be retrieved, I will make sure they have access and can copy the paper copies. This person may want to bring a scanner or a laptop to copy any videos. Give me a call if you have any questions. Let's set up a date if you have someone in mind who could come.

Sincerely,

Hi Carly,

I reached out to the court reporter, Elizabeth Harris, just to make sure. This is her reply:

Hey there! No indeedy. We handed over everything that was entered or marked for ID. If they didn't use it in any way in the trial, they never gave it to us, and it wasn't entered in the log. We left with our notes and that's it.

Hope this helps!
Have a great weekend!

Lori,

I'm sorry you're not feeling well. So thank you for being here . I have the exhibit sheet. Y'all will just need to go by that. It's Kenny Kinsey items. I also have the trial notebook for when he was called.

I can ask possibly one of the bailiffs to help her.

To: "Skehen, Kelly" <Kelly.Skehen@FOX.COM>

Hey Kelly!

I hope all of you have been doing well! Life has been busy! I am reaching out to you and Nancy about an interview in regards to the book that I've written with a co-author, Neil Gordon, from August, Ga. Our book, Behind the Doors of Justice is coming out August 1st and we are in the process of setting up interviews and tours and book signings. I've copied Neil on here also as he is truly the one in journalism and TV and is wonderful at the process.

Please feel free to reach out to us and let us know what we can set up together!

Happy 4th!!

Hi Miss Becky! This is Kelly Skehen. Senior Producer and Reporter for Nancy Grace. I've been with her in the courtroom. Any chance you can join our show today? We'll be live from 9:30-1. I know you'll be in court for much of it, but perhaps after sentencing? We'd love to have you. Please feel free to reach me at 913-219-9209. That will be the fastest way to reach me.

Thank you!!

Dear Jim, Dick and Holli,

I've received your letter regarding exhibits in re: State v. Murdaugh trial in Colleton County. I'm attaching the Dropbox link for Videos and then I will be attaching the Dropbox link for paper exhibits. If you believe there is anything missing, please let me know and we can arrange for a person to come look through the exhibits and scan in and make any copies needed. I will be glad to work with you in any way possible.

To: <richardw135@googlemail.com>

Dear Mr. Webb,

I have received your email request of the exhibits from the Murdaugh trial held earlier this year in Colleton County. I do not mind processing your request for the things that we have in our possession and that are not sealed. The transcript of the trial is still in the process of being processed. So the closing arguments of Mr. Waters will be a request that you will need to direct to S.C. Court Administration. You can email Tammie Holmes at Tholmes@sccourts.org .

I am going through the audio now on youtube of the closing arguments of Mr. Waters to see what exhibits he used. If the exhibits he used were not ordered to be under seal, then we will provide those.

I also need to know in what aspect you are requesting these exhibits. Are you with a firm, a media agency, etc.?

I look forward to hearing back from you.

Kind regards,

Okay guys you have to realize that I am a huge Mary Tyler Moore fan. I always have been even though I know she's past so unbeknowns to me during the trial a lady beautiful lady named Rhonda rich entered my courthouse she was just so physically beautiful and so sweet and southernly nice we bonded immediately of course and she even got a front row seat sometimes even sitting next to me at the front of the courtroom. this is just one of those things that I treated her like I would my best friend period well later she gave me some books of hers as she autographed. She always said if she could help me she always she would now she sent me flowers a few weeks ago and it was just signed Rhonda well I have 5 friends whose name is Rhonda and each Rhonda I asked said yeah thank you you're welcome. Come to find out it was this wrong the rich who sent me the flowers but they did not put her last name on them so she was checking with me today to see if I had received them and to check on me I had her on my list today to call or email and she emailed me first period you'll have to read the thread of emails it is just a God thing period she is Mary Tyler Moore's daughter-in-law ex daughter-in-law but still she and Mary had a very good relationship yall yall yall.

Becky Hill – I am here for YOU!

I will read your book, I will endorse it…I will do anything you need. Just ask.

I took email off my phone and iPad because it was too much. Too much in distraction. So, at the end of every day, I would think of you and writing but I had already signed off my email.

Again, the owners of the florist were SO grateful for the business. I told them to include both of my names but it's okay. I'm glad I asked if you received them.

I can never repay your kindness but I sure will take a shot at it.

My last name, professionally, is Ronda Rich. In private, I am Ronda Tinker. My father-in-law, Grant Tinker, and Mary founded MTM. If you haven't seen the documentary: Being Mary Tyler Moore on HBO and its streamer, HBO Max, you should. There's a couple of weak places in it but, for the most part, it is good.

Mary would be proud because I ordered your flowers, based on all of her very strict requirements.

Let me know how I can help you.

You gave me the memory of a lifetime. There isn't adequate repayment for that. Thank you.

Let me know whatever I can do to help you. We can talk whenever you want.

All of my love,

Ronda

Oh my goodness, you are such an angel!! Your MIL was Mary Tyler Moore!!! She was a FAVORITE of mine !!! Really!!!

Well, I have your wonderful signed books!!! I received your flowers, but the card just said, Ronda! and I have 5 friends who are Rhondas!!!! They ALL claimed the flowers!! Haha!!

I HAVE WRITTEN A BOOK and I want to talk to you about reading it and possibly giving a review of it WHEN you have time!!. I understand fully when you're head is in a book that you're writing and you are on deadline!!

I just can't express how much I enjoyed meeting you, getting to know you, receiving your books, and now that I know, your flowers, and I have thoroughly enjoyed reading your books. Please let me know if you have a brief window of time that we could talk by telephone. I would love to talk to you!

Hi Mrs. Hill

My girlfriend and I will be in Walterboro on Tuesday, June 27, around mid-afternoon. I planned to stop by just to see the Colleton County Courthouse, but I saw online that courthouse tours are offered. Is there any way my girlfriend and I could take a guided tour Tuesday?

As I said we plan to be there around mid-afternoon. We're headed to vacation in Savannah from our home in Hendersonville, NC. If a tour could be arranged I would be most grateful, but I understand if it cannot. I just wanted to reach out and ask.

Thank you for your time.

Dear Honorable Clerk:

Enclosed, please find your Unit Cost and Incentives Contracts for the 2024 State Fiscal Year. There are no major changes since last year; however, please note the following:

1. Article II, Paragraph A requires that the Palmetto Automated Child Support System (PACSS) be utilized when performing child support duties and responsibilities;
2. Article II, Paragraph I contains updated guidance from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), a copy of which is included in the Contract Addendum;
3. Article IV, Paragraph A usually includes the federal approved reimbursement rate; however, the Federal OCSE has not issued an approved rate at this time. The contract specifies that you will be paid at whatever rate the Federal OCSE ultimately approves. We will inform you of the approved rate as soon as the reimbursement rate is approved;
4. Article IV, Paragraph A also includes a new contact person for submitting the DSS Form 1164;
5. Article IV, Paragraph D includes additional language in regard to Disallowances and Set-Off for errors and omissions.

As usual, please scan or mail a copy of the signed signature page to Debbie Bowers or James Swick. Should you have any questions, please contact Debbie Bowers (803-724-5774 Debbie.Bowers@dss.sc.gov) or James Swick at (803-898-9169 James.Swick@dss.sc.gov). Thank you.

Hi both,

The text is also pasted below for reference.

Thank you!

On the twelfth day of his murder trial, Alex Murdaugh looked bored.

Mr Murdaugh sat hunched at the defence table in the second-floor courtroom of the Colleton County Courthouse in Walterboro, South Carolina. He wore a dark blue suit, white shirt, and no tie, his thin, rimless glasses perched on the very end of his nose. Sometimes he looked up at the witnesses speaking ahead of him, but mostly he looked down. Months in prison had whittled down his formerly heavy frame. Once a towering figure, now Alex Murdaugh looked small.

Mr Murdaugh, 54, was on trial in Walterboro for heinous crimes - execution-style killings of his wife Maggie and his son Paul in their family home. Two rows behind him in the courtroom sat his other son, 25-year-old Buster, the only surviving member of Mr Murdaugh's immediate family. Amid all the spectacle of the trial - the out of town licence plates, food trucks and media vans crowding this small city - Buster sat quietly every day in support of his father. Behind him, on the rear wall of the courtroom, there was a rectangular-shaped sun stain where a painting used to be - a portrait of his namesake, his great-grandfather Rudolph "Buster" Murdaugh, which had been taken down for the trial.

For nearly a century, the Murdaugh family dominated this rural pocket of South Carolina - a flat expanse of marshlands, palm trees, white clapboard churches and porch-ringed houses. Three generations of Murdaugh men had served as chief prosecutor of the local judicial circuit, a 3,200 square mile stretch in the state's south, while running a private litigation firm that made them rich.

But according to prosecutors, Mr Murdaugh was stealing from that firm - millions of dollars over a decade. The murders of his wife and son, they allege, were a desperate attempt to distract from those financial crimes, which were nearing exposure in another case - a wrongful death suit involving Paul. He has pleaded not guilty to the murders.

Since his first arrest in September 2021, Mr Murdaugh's case has become a bizarre and twisted saga, featuring allegations of embezzlement, drug abuse, and a faked assassination attempt. But it has also exposed the apparently unchecked power of the Murdaugh family in their small community in South Carolina, and brought about the undoing of a local dynasty.

"This is what happens when average people have no checks and balances," said Bill Nettles, former US Attorney for South Carolina.

"And there were no checks and balances on him."

To know South Carolina's Lowcountry is to know the Murdaugh family name. For 86 unbroken years, 1920 to 2006, a Murdaugh presided as the chief prosecutor for South Carolina's Fourteenth Judicial Circuit. It was the longest such stretch of family control in United States history.

"They were the law," Mr Nettles said.

For even longer, the Murdaughs worked at the family-founded litigation firm, amassing a small fortune and building out their dominance in all corners of the Lowcountry.

Along the highways in this part of the state, large billboards are posted on almost every mile. Most were for fast food restaurants and prayer hotlines, but many were for personal injury law firms - a thriving industry in the Lowcountry. And by all accounts, the Murdaugh's firm - Peters, Murdaugh, Parker, Eltzroth & Detrick (PMPED) - was the best.

"They could get a verdict that would exceed the norm dramatically," said South Carolina lawyer Joe McCulloch, who has faced three generations of Murdaughs in court.

"And when I say exceed the norm - they could turn a $100,000 case into a million dollar settlement."

The Murdaugh's judicial circuit became known as a mecca for plaintiffs, spurring rumours of judicial corruption and jury tampering. At the very least, locals said, the Murdaugh's stature gave them the upper hand in trial.

"When people graduated high school, they would send gifts, they paid for funerals, sent flowers to people who were in the hospital," said Eric Bland, a malpractice attorney based in South Carolina, who was involved in a suit against Mr Murdaugh.

"When they got in front of juries, they knew them," he said. "They salted the town with goodwill."

The rail company CSX Transportation was sued so often and so successfully by PMPED that the firm's office became known as the house that CSX built. And corporations who could avoid it reportedly skipped the area entirely.

From these two offices, as both public prosecutors and private attorneys, the Murdaughs established themselves as a de facto authority of the Lowcountry. Their influence was not wide - it did not even span the width of the state - but it was deep. In the small, insular community where they lived, residents said, the Murdaugh family ruled.

"They controlled this area for years and years," said Wally Pregnall, a retired administrator at the Medical University of South Carolina, who had driven from Charleston to see the trial up close. "The connection to the good ol' boys network, the power and the politics in South Carolina… that's all coming into play."

"We all knew them," said one waitress in town, who also didn't want to give her name, saying she didn't want to "get in trouble" for speaking out of turn. She also didn't want to be recorded. "You're just going to have to remember this," she said. "They had power, dirty power. And they took it too far."

In the third week of the trial, the former chief financial officer of PMPED Jeanne Seckinger described Alex Murdaugh's approach as a lawyer. "The art of bullshit, basically," she said.

Mr Murdaugh joined the family firm in the late 1990s, the fourth generation of his family's legal dynasty. He was successful, "not from his work ethic", Ms Seckinger said, "but his ability to establish relationships and manipulate people into settlements and clients into liking him."

According to colleagues, he was a loud and frenetic presence, always late and always in a rush, keeping different hours from the rest of the attorneys.

State and federal prosecutors - supported by testimony from Ms Seckinger and others - now say Mr Murdaugh was stealing from the firm, robbing colleagues and clients as early as 2011. Since the murders, he has been criminally charged with stealing about $8.8m (£7.31m) from a number of victims and has been disbarred. Friends have testified Mr Murdaugh has confessed to financial wrongdoing, but he has not yet entered a plea in those cases.

The prosecutors' arguments paint a picture of fraud and theft at an almost implausible scale, and of a perpetrator convinced of his impunity. Mr Murdaugh, they allege, stole indiscriminately from colleagues and clients, the young and old, the disabled and sick.

"You look at it from afar and say 'this is not possible', there has to be something to prevent abuses and improprieties that ridiculous," said veteran journalist and South Carolina University professor Randy Covington. "But the answer is no, there wasn't."

At trial, Ms Seckinger detailed at least a dozen of these crimes. Her more than three hours of testimony began to sound like a record on loop. "Alex stole it", she said, again and again. To her right, a weary-looking bailiff appeared to fall asleep, gun still holstered to his hip.

According to the prosecution, Mr Murdaugh's exact methods varied. Sometimes he faked signatures, other times he claimed inflated expenses. He syphoned millions by impersonating a legitimate insurance company.

"Everybody just assumed they were the Murdaughs so they must be doing it right," Mr Nettles said.

For years, Ms Seckinger testified, she had noticed yellow flags, small irregularities in his files. But the firm was a "brotherhood", she said. "They trusted him."

Tony Satterfield trusted Mr Murdaugh too. When Mr Satterfield's mother, Gloria - the Murdaugh's housekeeper for 20 years - died after a fall at work, Mr Murdaugh recommended a lawyer he knew who could help them file a wrongful death suit against him.

Two of Mr Murdaugh's insurance policies paid out a total of $4.3m, but the Satterfields did not receive a dime. They did not even know the case had been settled. Alex Murdaugh, in conjunction with the lawyer he recommended, had kept it himself.

"I feel like if someone had paid closer attention, they would have figured this out," said Eric Bland, the malpractice lawyer who represented the Satterfields against Mr Murdaugh. "But those kids revered the Murdaughs, they trusted him."

One year after Gloria Satterfield died, there was another fatal accident in the Murdaugh family orbit.

Late in the evening of 24 February 2019, Paul Murdaugh was aboard the family boat when it rammed headlong into the Archers Creek Bridge in Beaufort, throwing three of the six passengers - all young adults - into the cold water below. One of them, 19-year-old Mallory Beach, was killed, her body recovered days later in a marsh several miles away.

The tragedy would present a problem that Alex Murdaugh could not contain.

At the time of impact, according to all of the other passengers, Paul had been driving. A blood test would find the 19-year-old Murdaugh's blood alcohol level was three times the legal limit.

Taken together, witness testimony from the night - from the survivors, authorities, and hospital staff - renders an image of Mr Murdaugh hellbent on insulating his son. He roamed from room to room, they said, trying to speak to the teenagers. A nurse said he looked like he was trying to "orchestrate something". One passenger, Connor Cook, testified he was told by Mr Murdaugh "to keep my mouth shut". He was scared, he said, "them being who they are".

"It was a test of the system," said Mandy Mattney, a reporter based in South Carolina who has led coverage of the Murdaughs since the 2019 crash. "Everyone in Hampton really believed that Paul wouldn't be charged."

For two months, he wasn't. But the other survivors would all eventually testify that Paul was behind the wheel and in April 2019, he was charged with three crimes, including boating under the influence resulting in death. Looking back now, it may have been the moment Alex Murdaugh's life began to unravel.

The family of Mallory Beach hired a lawyer named Mark Tinsley to represent them in a wrongful death suit against Mr Murdaugh. Mr Tinsley, who is bearded and gruff, testified he planned to hold Mr Murdaugh "personally responsible" and seek millions in damages.

Mr Murdaugh claimed he was broke. "I didn't believe it," Mr Tinsley said.

So Mr Tinsley filed a motion to compel Mr Murdaugh to disclose his finances. A hearing on the matter was scheduled for 10 June, 2021. The disclosure would reveal his years of corporate fraud.

"The fuse was lit," Mr Tinsley said.

On 7 June 2021, three days before the hearing on his finances was scheduled, Alex Murdaugh called 911. His wife Maggie and son Paul had been shot, he said.

By the time the first sheriff's deputy had arrived at the family's 1,700 acre hunting estate, Moselle, Mr Murdaugh had a theory. "My son was in a boat wreck months back; he's getting threats," he said. "I know that's what it is."

Many in the Lowcountry believed him. Colleagues and friends testified they feared for Alex and his older son, Buster, thinking they both might be in danger. Mr Tinsley's case was over. "If Alex was the victim of a vigilante, nobody's going to hold him accountable," he said in court. "Sympathies had changed."

But three months later, Mr Murdaugh called 911 again, this time to report he had been shot in the head on the side of a rural road. He later admitted to arranging a botched hit on himself so that Buster could collect on his life insurance. As the ploy fell apart, PMPED disclosed they had pushed him out of the firm the day before the incident over alleged embezzlement. An investigation would later reveal he had first been confronted about missing money by CFO Jeanne Seckinger on 7 June - the day Maggie and Paul were killed. Mr Murdaugh issued a statement apologising and entered a drug rehab programme in another state.

In July 2022, Mr Murdaugh was arrested in the killings.

For five weeks now, the Murdaugh family's sordid downfall has drawn early morning crowds to the Walterboro courthouse, a line too long to fit inside. Upstairs, in the courtroom's cool air, spectators in suits and sundresses filled row after row of the dark wooden pews that line the room. At times, the atmosphere felt strangely like a church reception, Mr Murdaugh's brothers and son milling around, offering handshakes and weak smiles.

In this room, at least, sympathies have changed again. In the court of public opinion, Alex Murdaugh has lost. "He did it. I don't think it's even a question," said Deborah Brinkley, who had travelled two hours from Aiken, South Carolina to watch the proceedings.

But for a century, the Murdaugh family has made an ally out of juries, walking out of courtrooms with the judgments that built their fortune and cemented their influence. Alex Murdaugh's fate will be decided the same way, perhaps a final test of his sway in a case where all the evidence is circumstantial - there was no murder weapon found, no blood on Mr Murdaugh's t-shirt that night, no eyewitnesses to the killings.

And observers in Walterboro have speculated that Mr Murdaugh will take the stand and argue for his innocence himself.

"He still believes he still has the power to convince and manipulate regular people, like the jury," Ms Matney said. "And at the end of the day it comes down to them."

Hello,

The Murdaugh text is copied below and at this google doc: https://docs.google.com/document/d/1Ssk-nCuuDqP44eCmZhzAXBtdonjxZ_4sxPsX3J8Jeil/edit?usp=sharing

I have started a CPS file shell: 64645725

The court clerk just gave me access to the pool photos, which are great. Lots of Murdaugh and several of the characters I have in the story. https://www.flickr.com/photos/197478431@N03/

I have a freelance photographer in the area who is available but I think these will go a long way.

I will check in on Friday and can take up edits/production then or over the weekend. Scheduling the piece next week would be smart – we will catch the traffic around closing arguments etc but will still be ahead of a verdict. And there are rumours that the defence will call Alex to the stand which would add fantastic colour to the the story, particularly the end.

Thanks very much both, I'm so pleased I was able to go last week!

On the twelfth day of his murder trial, Alex Murdaugh looked bored

Mr Murdaugh sat hunched at the defence table in the second-floor courtroom of the Colleton County Courthouse in Walterboro, South Carolina. He wore a dark blue suit, white shirt, and no tie, his thin, rimless glasses perched on the very end of his nose. Sometimes he looked up at the witnesses testifying ahead of him, but mostly he looked down. Months in prison had whittled down his formerly heavy frame. Once a towering figure, now Alex Murdaugh looked small.

Mr Murdaugh, 54, was on trial in Walterboro for heinous crimes - execution-style killings of his wife Maggie and his son Paul in their family home. Two rows behind him in the courtroom sat his other son, 25-year-old Buster, the only surviving member of Mr Murdaugh's immediate family. Amid all the spectacle of the trial - the out of town licence plates, food trucks and media vans crowding this small city - Buster sat quietly every day in support of his father. Behind him, on the rear wall of the courtroom, there was a rectangular-shaped sun stain where a painting used to be - a portrait of his namesake, his great-grandfather Rudolph "Buster" Murdaugh, which had been taken down for the trial.

For nearly a century, the Murdaugh family dominated this small pocket of South Carolina - a flat expanse of marshlands, palm trees, white clapboard churches, and porch-ringed homes. Three generations of Murdaugh men had served as chief prosecutor of the local judicial circuit, a 3,200 square mile stretch in the state's south, while running a private litigation firm that made them rich.

But according to prosecutors, Mr Murdaugh was stealing from that firm - millions of dollars over a decade. The murders of his wife and son, they allege, were a desperate attempt to distract from those financial crimes, which were nearing exposure in a civil case involving Paul, who had been involved in a fatal speedboat accident. He has pleaded not guilty to the murders.

Since his first arrest in September 2021, Mr Murdaugh's case has become a bizarre and twisted saga, featuring allegations of embezzlement, drug abuse and a faked assassination attempt. But it has also exposed the apparently unchecked power of the Murdaugh family in their small community in South Carolina, and brought about the undoing of a local dynasty.

"This is what happens when average people have no checks and balances," said Bill Nettles, former US Attorney for South Carolina.

"And there were no checks and balances on him."

To know South Carolina's Lowcountry, is to know the Murdaugh family name. For 86 unbroken years, from 1920 to 2006, a Murdaugh presided as the chief prosecutor for South Carolina's Fourteenth Judicial Circuit. It was the longest such stretch of family control in United States history.

"They were the law," Mr Nettles said.

For even longer, the Murdaugh men worked at the family-founded litigation firm, amassing a small fortune and cultivating their dominance in all corners of the Lowcountry.

Along the highways in this part of the state, large billboards are posted on almost every mile. Most were for fast food restaurants and prayer hotlines but many were for personal injury lawyers - a thriving industry in the Lowcountry. And by all accounts, the Murdaugh's firm - Peters, Murdaugh, Parker, Eltzroth & Detrick (PMPED) - was the best.

"They could get a verdict that would exceed the norm dramatically," said South Carolina lawyer Joe McCulloch, who has faced three generations of Murdaughs in court.

"And when I say exceed the norm - they could turn a $100,000 case into a million dollar settlement."

The Murdaugh's judicial circuit became known as a mecca for plaintiffs, spurring rumours of judicial corruption and jury tampering. At the very least, locals said, the Murdaugh's stature gave them a leg up at trial.

"When people graduated high school, they would send gifts, they paid for funerals, sent flowers to people who were in the hospital," said Eric Bland, a malpractice attorney based in South Carolina, involved in a suit against Mr Murdaugh.

"When they got in front of juries, they knew them," he said. "They salted the town with goodwill."

The rail company CSX Transportation was sued so often and so successfully by PMPED that the firm's office became known as the house that CSX built. And corporations who could avoid it reportedly skipped the area entirely.

From these two offices, as both public prosecutors and private attorneys, the Murdaughs established themselves as a de facto authority of the Lowcountry. Their influence was not wide - it did not even span the width of the state - but it was deep. In the small, insular community where they lived, residents said, the Murdaugh family ruled.

"They controlled this area for years and years," said Wally Pregnall, a retired administrator at the Medical University of South Carolina, who had driven from Charleston to see the trial up close. "The connection to the good ol' boy network, the power and the politics in South Carolina… that's all coming into play."

"We all knew them," said one waitress in town, who also didn't want to give her name, saying she didn't want to "get in trouble" for speaking against the family. She also didn't want to be recorded. "You're just going to have to remember this," she said. "They had power, dirty power. And they took it too far."

In the third week of Mr Murdaugh's trial, the former chief financial officer of PMPED Jeanne Seckinger described Alex Murdaugh's style as a lawyer. "The art of bullshit, basically," she said.

Mr Murdaugh, who joined the family firm in the late 1990s, was successful, “not from his work ethic”, Ms Seckinger said, “but his ability to establish relationships and to manipulate people into settlements and clients into liking him”.

According to colleagues, he was a loud and frenetic presence, always late and always in a rush, keeping different hours from the rest of the attorneys.

State and federal prosecutors - supported by testimony from Ms Seckinger and others - now say Mr Murdaugh was stealing from his firm, robbing colleagues and clients as early as 2011. He faces some 90 charges for alleged financial wrongdoing. Friends have testified that he confessed and apologised for the theft after it came to light, but he has not yet entered a plea in these cases.

The prosecutors’ arguments paint a picture of fraud and theft at an almost implausible scale, and of a perpetrator convinced of his impunity. Mr Murdaugh, they allege, stole indiscriminately from colleagues and clients, the young and old, the disabled and sick.

“You look at it from afar and say ‘this is not possible’, there has to be something to prevent abuses and improprieties that ridiculous,” said veteran journalist and South Carolina University professor Randy Covington. “But the answer is no, there wasn’t.”

At trial, Ms Seckinger detailed at least a dozen of these crimes. Her more than three hours of testimony began to sound like a record on loop. “Alex stole it”, she said, again and again. To her right, a weary-looking bailiff appeared to fall asleep, gun still holstered to his hip.

According to the prosecution, Mr Murdaugh’s exact methods varied. Sometimes he faked signatures, other times he claimed inflated expenses. Other methods were crude. He opened a personal bank account under the name “Forge”, meant to impersonate a legitimate insurance company called Forge Consulting.

“Everybody just assumed they were the Murdaughs so they must be doing it right,” Mr Nettles said.

For years, Ms Seckinger said, she had noticed yellow flags, small irregularities in his files. But the firm was a “brotherhood”, she said. “They trusted him”.

Tony Satterfield trusted Mr Murdaugh too. When Mr Satterfield’s mother, Gloria - the Murdaugh’s long time housekeeper - died after a fall at work, Mr Murdaugh recommended a lawyer he knew who could help them file a wrongful death suit against the family.

Mr Murdaugh’s insurance company paid out to the tune of $4.4m, but the Satterfields did not receive a dime, they did not even know the case had been settled. Alex Murdaugh, in conjunction with the lawyer he had recommended, had kept it himself.

“I feel like if someone paid closer attention, they would have figured this out,” said Eric Bland, the malpractice lawyer who represented the Satterfields in a suit against Mr Murdaugh. “But those kids revered the Murdaughs, they trusted him.”

One year after Gloria Setterfield died, there was another fatal accident in the Murdaugh family orbit.

Paul Murdaugh, Mr Murdaugh’s 19-year-old son, was aboard the family’s boat late at night when it rammed into the Archers Creek Bridge in Beaufort, throwing three of the six passengers, all young adults, into the cold water below. One of them, 19-year-old Mallory Beach, was killed - her body recovered days later in a marsh several miles away.

News of the accident - the tragic death of a young woman, the presence of a Murdaugh - gripped the Lowcountry.

“I think folks were kind of like - this is going to be an interesting test of the system, a test to see if the system treats Paul any differently,” said Bill Nettles. “Once this boat crash happened, it seems to me, it went outside something they could contain.”

Later, all of the survivors except for Paul would testify that it had been him behind the wheel at the time of impact. But on the night, there seemed to be confusion about who was driving - Paul or his friend, Connor Cook.

Witnesses eventually testified that that confusion had a source: Alex Murdaugh. According to their testimony, Alex roamed from room to room, trying to speak to the teenagers. A nurse told investigators he looked like he was trying to “orchestrate something”. Connor Cook testified that he was told to “to keep my mouth shut”.

He was scared, he told lawyers, “them being who they are”.

But two months later, in April 2019, Paul Murdaugh was charged with three crimes, including boating under the influence resulting in death. Looking back now, it may have been the moment Alex Murdaugh’s life began to unravel.

The family of Mallory Beach hired a lawyer named Mark Tinsely to represent them in a wrongful death suit against Alex Murdaugh. Mr Tinsley, who is bearded and gruff, testified he planned to hold Mr Murdaugh “personally responsible” and seek millions in damages.

Mr Murdaugh claimed he was broke. “I didn’t believe it,” Mr Tinsley said.

So Mr Tinsley filed a motion to compel Mr Murdaugh to disclose his finances. A hearing on the matter was scheduled for 10 June, 2021. The disclosure would reveal his years of corporate fraud.

“The fuse was lit,” Mr Tinsley said.

On 7 June 2021, three days before the hearing on his finances was scheduled, the Colleton County Sheriff’s office received a call from Alex Murdaugh. His wife Maggie and son Paul had been shot, he said.

By the time the first sheriff’s deputy had arrived at the family’s 1,700 acre hunting estate, Moselle, Mr Murdaugh had a theory. “My son was in a boat wreck months back; he’s getting threats,” he said. “I know that’s what it is.”

For weeks, most people in the Lowcountry seemed to believe him. Mr Tinsley’s case was over. “If Alex was the victim of a vigilante, nobody’s going to hold him accountable,” he said in court. “Sympathies had changed.”

But in July 2022, more than a year later, Mr Murdaugh was arrested in the killings. By then, his life was in free fall. He had been pushed out of the family firm over evidence of theft. An investigation would find he had been confronted about missing money at the firm by Jeanne Seckinger on 7 June - the same day Maggie and Paul were killed. And he had admitted to organising a botched hit on himself so that his surviving son could collect on his life insurance.

“This may be the most outrageous thing I’ve seen in 30 years in South Carolina,” journalist Randy Covington said.

But inside the Colleton County Courthouse, where the trial has now stretched for weeks, the atmosphere was mostly staid, looking at times like a wedding reception. Spectators in suits, sundresses and heels milled around in the moments between witnesses, passing around mints and sharing sweaters for the courtroom’s cool air.

Several said they had come to see the powerful finally held to account, even as Mr Murdaugh was still apparently receiving deferential treatment. “He’s chewing gum, he’s talking to family… he even touched them,” Eric Bland said. “For normal defendants, that doesn’t happen.”

But for decades, juries in the Lowcountry have sided with the Murdaugh family, issuing the settlements that made them wealthy. Alex Murdaugh’s future will be decided the same way, perhaps a final test of his influence.

“Have you noticed?” said one woman, named Linda, who had driven from Hilton Head to watch and declined to give her last name. “He only cries when the jury is looking.”

Good afternoon, Mayor Young,

We met on the set at Colleton County Courthouse for Zeke's Eighth Round movie. Thank you for taking your time and talking to me.

If you remember, I am an elected Clerk of Court for Colleton County and I have reached out to my Ethics Commission and I've gotten a slightly generic response from them. I spoke with my Chief Justice of SC and he verbally gave me the go ahead on writing a book about the Murdaugh trial that we had earlier this year.

However, I really want to be sure I don't get indicted and tried in a criminal court. My question is did you have to get firm answers to any ethical and legal questions for you to write your books?

Any help is much appreciated! Kind regards,

Would it be too much to add this in to the last paragraph? Becky's insight and day-to- day involvement with every single thing going on behind the scenes was just too much good stuff not to share with anyone interested. Becky likes Toni Morrisons quote that says,: If there's a book you want to read, but it hasn't been written yet, you must write it." And that's exactly what she did!

Also, do you know which of the covers you'd like to move forward with?

To: "ryshuler@bellsouth.net" <RYSHULER@bellsouth.net>

Rita!

Good afternoon! Hope you are doing well. It was such a pleasure meeting you on Friday. I believe everyone we meet is by design!

I heard you talking briefly on Friday about a few other elected officials who wrote a book but didn't get to hear the conversation fully. Would you be able to share with me who some are that you know or have heard of? I would like to contact them and see how they proceeded with the Ethics Commission and other entities. I've gotten some "haters" out there who are making their voices hear and I want to make sure I don't get indicted and go to jail! LOL

I am hoping it works out for you to join us on Thursday afternoon/evening. I believe we will have a very good crowd. The Colleton Museum Farmer's Market is a beautiful area and has lots of room. There will be heavy finger foods also.

If you have any questions, just give me a call!

Subject: Employee retirement
To: "Deadgrea Sadler" <dsadler@colletoncounty.org>

Good morning Queen D! I hope that this day finds you well. I have a question about one of my employees who is 72 and I would like to help her have incentive to retire as we need more technology that is in her position for the job that she cannot handle.

Before I go to Jon and Asmin I wanted to check with you to see your thoughts on if this could be a possibility.
If she would retire by the end of June I'd like to offer her a $5000 incentive out of our 4-D moneys and she is in family court. So thr $$ wouldn't come from cou ty funds, but our DSS IVD FUNDS.

I had asked for an additional employee for our circuit court area but of course I understand that that did not get approved across-the-board so it would really help me if I could have Mrs. Trish Retire and move our part time person Into her full time spot and utilize that part time position for the circuit court area where I need it. I welcome any thoughts you have.

Becky's insight and day-to- day involvement with every single thing going on behind the scenes was just too much good stuff not to share with anyone interested. Becky likes Toni Morrisons quote that says,: If there's a book you want to read, but it hasn't been written yet, you must write it." And that's exactly what she did!

Hi Drew!

I am sending you the letter that Harpootlian sent to me requesting exhibits from trial. I had already sent them, but perhaps he thought there were more? Not sure.

Take care!

Hi Becky,

I hope you've been well! I was speaking with the Attorney General's office about gathering more state exhibits from the Murdaugh murder trial and they have directed me to you, so I am hoping you can help us.

We are seeking exhibits such as: Alex's t-shirt, the blue raincoat, firearms photos, photo evidence from the cell phones, DNA comparison sheets, and autopsy reports, evidence photos of vehicles, evidence photos from around Moselle, and photos of Alex's solicitor badge. I'm sure there's more, but watching the trial is tough to see everything. If you need additional information to process this request, please let me know.

Thank you!

Yes, I would be happy to!

Thank you for purchasing the book and hope you and your wife enjoy reading it.

Kind regards,
